Egyptian Suez attack is charged by Israelis

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The Israeli military command charged that the Egyptians launched a strong air and armored attack on the Suez front today even as U.N. truce observers headed for the battle lines to enforce the second attempt at a Middle East ceasefire.

The Egyptian counter-offensive was mounted to save Cairo's forces on the eastern bank of the Suez Canal from encirclement by Israeli tanks and troops doubling back from their penetration into Egypt west of the waterway, Tel Aviv claimed.

The reported fighting came only a few hours after Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan announced the new cease-fire was in effect and seemed to be "working properly."

There was no immediate word from Cairo. But the Israeli claims of renewed combat appeared to jeopardize the already precarious truce, reiterated by the U.N. Security Council on Tuesday night after its first cease-fire collapsed in furious fighting.

The Israeli reports did not pinpoint the area of combat but indicated it was at the southern end of the canal near Suez city.

An earlier communique from Cairo claimed the Israelis tried to cut the main road to Cairo near Suez city "but our forces are preventing him by force from accomplishing his objective."

The Israelis said 15 Egyptian fighter planes were shot down in dogfights over the battlefield.

The Israelis earlier said their invasion force had pushed south from its foothold midway up the canal, moving along the western bank of the canal past Suez city at the waterway's southern end in an attempt to cut off the Egyptian 3rd Army on the eastern bank.

Egypt charged the Israelis made the gains by taking advantage of the first cease-fire attempt Monday and Tuesday nights.

Israeli spokesmen claimed their invasion tanks and artillery now dominate the main Egyptian supply routes from Cairo east to Ismailia and from Cairo southeast to Suez city.

Egypt, which called for the Security Council session that produced the second U.S.-Soviet truce proposal, did not formally announce its acceptance of the new cease-fire this morning.

But the head of the U.N. truce observers in Cairo, Col. Ake Bendrik of Sweden, confirmed that Egypt had accepted the 7 a.m. — 1 a.m. EDT — halt. He said he had transmitted the Egyptian acceptance to Israel and the truce was officially put into effect with the accord of both Suez adversaries.

Syria, which ignored the first cease-fire call, announced it also accepted the new truce, but on condition that Israel withdraw "from all Arab territories occupied in June 1967 and thereafter, and on the basis of guaranteeing the rights of the Palestinian people."

U.S. is prepared for weapons airlift talks

WASHINGTON (AP) — The State Department today said the United States is prepared to discuss with the Soviet Union a mutual reduction in the massive airlift of weapons to Israel and the Arab states.

The prospect was raised by Robert J. McCloskey, the department spokesman, at a press briefing.

Meanwhile, he said, except for occasional ups and downs caused by the weather or scheduling, the U.S. resupply effort for Israel has continued "apace."

On the war itself, the spokesman said the second cease-fire call by the U.S. Security Council "appears to be taking effect."

Earlier, senior U.S. officials said Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev did not agree during their Moscow meeting on either a forum or a formula on a way to bring Israel and Egypt together to negotiate a lasting Middle East settlement.

Instead, their efforts were directed toward ending the fighting. While they talked about a slowdown in current arms shipments, there was no decision to halt them over the long run.

Prodding Israel, Egypt and Jordan to the bargaining table has been probably the toughest problem in the 25-year search for a settlement.

Israel is skeptical of working through the United Nations where it has few friends. The United States has offered its "good offices," but Israel and the Arab states have been snarled in preconditions for negotiations.

A first cease-fire agreement was reached Monday and another was announced by the Israeli military command early today.

Meanwhile, Kissinger's preoccupation with the Middle East caused him to postpone, probably for weeks, the visit to China he was to have undertaken beginning today.

The secretary of state will appear Thursday before the House Foreign Affairs Committee. The closed session will be the first briefing for Congress since his Moscow mission.

Nine killed and 40 injured in pile-ups

KEARNY N.J. (AP) — At least nine persons were killed and more than 40 injured today in three major pile-ups and scores of minor accidents on the fog-shrouded New Jersey Turnpike, police said.

According to a state police spokesman, five persons died in one 22-vehicle crash, which occurred where the roadway passes through this industrial community between Newark and New York. The other four fatalities occurred in two separate pile-ups near Secaucus, about two miles north of here.

Sgt. Joseph Kobus of the state police said the accidents resulted from low visibility caused by the fog mixed with smoke from a week-long swamp fire in the Hackensack Meadows.

Kobus said the series of pileups constituted the worst traffic mishap in the history of the turnpike, which opened in 1952.

The smoke and fog also hindered rescue operations, police said.

At one point, the turnpike, the nation's busiest toll road, was closed in both directions from Woodbridge to its northern terminus near the George Washington Bridge, a distance of more than 30 miles.

Later the southbound lanes of the highway were reopened from the northern terminus to Secaucus. Also closed was the Hudson Bay extension, which leads to the Holland tunnel into New York.

Speed limits on the superhighway, normally 60 m.p.h., were reduced to 45 m.p.h.

Kobus said that the second worst crash in turnpike history occurred only last Saturday, when a bus-car-truck collision near Bordentown killed eight and injured 13.

Surrounding highways were snarled by massive traffic jams as the accidents blocked New York-bound motorists during rush hour. The tieups continued into late morning.

At Woodbridge, some commuters left their idled buses and tried to hitchhike back toward home. Some of the drivers involved in the three major accidents said fog was at fault. Several told of being hit from behind after stopping because they couldn't see.

Howard Fleetwood, a truck driver for the Tarheel Casket Co. of Woodland, N.C., said one of the crashes near Secaucus looked like "about eight tractor-trailers together in one heap of metal."

Fleetwood, who came upon the accident after it happened, said, "The fog was so heavy you couldn't see a hand in front of your face."

Another truck driver, Linwood House of Clifton, N.J., said, "I couldn't see a damn thing but I could hear the explosion. It sounded about four feet away from me but I just couldn't see it."

Many political leaders across the nation have expressed happiness and relief over President Nixon's decision to surrender the White House tapes. There were also expressions of bewilderment over its timing.

Several said Nixon had acted in the best interest of the country and they expressed hope his concession would silence his critics and end the controversy over the tapes.

After staunchly refusing for months to give up nine Watergate tape recordings and firing special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox last Saturday over the issue, Nixon agreed Tuesday to surrender by a court order to abide the tapes to U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica.

"Thank God," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz.

Cox said, "I know all citizens will be happy, as I am, that the President wisely chose to respect the rule of law."

"I am proud of the President," said Republican state chairman Jack Ransom of Kansas, adding he believed Nixon's release of the tapes would reduce the pressure in Congress for impeachment.

Watergate speech cancelled by Nixon

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon cancelled a speech tonight on Watergate, the White House explaining that he was busy today dealing with developments in the Middle East. That change in plans came while the House pressed ahead with its preliminary impeachment inquiry.

Although the President's startling decision to surrender the tapes to the courts appeared to blunt the day-old impeachment move, it didn't silence calls for a new special prosecutor. The head of the American Bar Association today called for a new, independent prosecutor to replace Archibald Cox, who was fired by Nixon.

The President had announced that he would address the nation by radio and television tonight, but he cancelled that speech and scheduled a new conference for 9 p.m. EDT Thursday.

The President spent the night at his mountaintop retreat at Camp David, Md., where he had been expected to work on a speech explaining his decision to capitulate to a federal appeals court ruling on the tapes. But instead he spent the evening on the telephone attempting to arrange a cease-fire in the Middle East War, Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said today.

Nixon returned to the White House this morning and planned to spend the remainder of the day on the Middle East situation, Warren said.

He said Nixon simply didn't have time to prepare the speech he had planned on the Watergate affair.

As Nixon returned to Washington, the chairman of the House Judiciary committee raised the possibility that he would subpoena administration records for the panel's impeachment probe.

Rep. Peter W. Rodino Jr., D-N.J., stopped short of saying he would try to inspect evidence gathered by Cox, but he repeated his insistence that Cox's material should be kept intact for use by others.

He said he intends to have his panel consider general use of subpoenas in its impeachment inquiry, which began Tuesday shortly before Nixon's lawyers announced his decision to surrender the Watergate tapes and documents that Cox had tried to subpoena.

Nixon's attempt last week to seek a compromise on the tapes issue was viewed at the White House as a generous offer and it was thought the public would agree, White House lawyer Charles Alan Wright said. "Obviously, that was a miscalculation," he said.

White House Chief of Staff Alexander M. Haig Jr. denied that fear of impeachment played a part in the decision to surrender the tapes.

Haig said he was "very confident" that

Nixon would have escaped impeachment even if he had not agreed to supply the tapes and said there is no chance at all of impeachment now.

Meanwhile, today the House of Representatives continued a preliminary impeachment inquiry, begun just before Nixon's lawyers announced the tapes would be given to a federal judge.

House leaders said the probe would continue at least until the effects of Nixon's action become known.

It was clear, however, that initial reaction to the President's reversal was favorable.

"Thank God," said Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz. "I'm glad it came to pass," said Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss.

Wall Street's Dow-Jones industrial average jumped 17 points in less than an hour on news of Nixon's decision.

It was a day of surprising events. Here is where things stood when the dust settled:

—U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica was scheduled soon to begin reviewing the nine tapes of Nixon's private conversations about the Watergate scandal. These are tapes that special prosecutor Archibald Cox had sought before he was fired.

Sirica will listen to them in private and decide what, if any, parts of them should

Cox hearing set for Monday

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Judiciary Committee today set a public hearing for next Monday to take testimony from Archibald Cox about his ouster by President Nixon as special Watergate prosecutor.

Committee members said after a closed-door meeting lasting nearly two hours that there was no discussion of hearing other witnesses.

Action was blocked on a resolution by a group of Democratic liberals on the committee calling on Nixon to reinstate Cox temporarily until Congress acts on legislation to provide by law an independent Watergate prosecutor.

Sources reported that Sen. Roman L. Hruska, R-Nebr., the ranking Republican on the committee, invoked a rule to force a week's delay on the liberals' move.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., had said before the committee met that he and some other liberal Democratic members hoped to have Cox appear as a witness immediately.

He said Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss., indicated to him that Cox would be called to testify immediately if that were the will of the committee.

Cox was fired on President Nixon's order after his refusal to drop his efforts to subpoena tapes and other Watergate-related materials in the possession of the White House.

However, Nixon agreed Tuesday to comply with court orders to turn over the tapes and other papers to S. District Judge John L. Sirica.

While this seemed to undercut a surge of impeachment moves, it did not lessen the demands of Kennedy and some other Democrats on the Judiciary Committee for investigating the Cox removal.

Some senators said they would continue efforts to pass legislation to provide for a court-appointed special prosecutor, not subject to dismissal by the President.

Such bills were introduced by Sens. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., and Adlai E. Stevenson III, D-Ill.

Introduction of another bill sponsored by Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., Philip A. Hart, D-Mich., Kennedy and some other Judiciary Committee members was delayed until Friday.

Bayh said he hoped for additional sponsors by then, including possibly one or two Republicans.

One GOP committee member, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, said he supported the creation of an independent prosecutor.

Kennedy was among senators who said they expected Nixon's release of the tapes to defuse impeachment moves, at least for now. Several said they felt the President had been forced to change course because of adverse public reaction.

Sen. John V. Tunney, D-Calif., called it "a victory for the American people."

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., said he was "extremely happy" with Nixon's decision. Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., said it was a major step toward getting all the pertinent Watergate facts out in the open.

House pressing ahead with Nixon impeachment inquiry

WASHINGTON (AP) — Speaker Carl Albert said today the preliminary House inquiry on impeachment of President Nixon will proceed regardless of the President's release of the Watergate tapes.

"I hope it is expeditious, and I hope it lays this thing to rest one way or another," Albert told newsmen.

The speaker said the House Judiciary Committee has been mandated to make inquiries into resolutions to impeach or to bring impeachment charges against the President "and inquiries it is going to make."

Earlier Judiciary Committee Chairman Peter W. Rodino Jr. raised the possibility of subpoenaing Nixon administration records for the impeachment inquiry.

The New Jersey Democrat said that did not necessarily mean he wants to subpoena the evidence gathered by special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox before President Nixon fired Cox.

But Rodino repeated that his insistence that Cox's files be kept intact for possible use by others still stands.

Rodino said for now he intends only to have his committee consider general use of subpoena powers in its inquiry into whether there are grounds for impeaching the President.

A committee spokesman said earlier that the panel's plans for its inquiry were basically unaffected by Nixon's sudden decision to release his Watergate tapes to the court.

Nixon acted Tuesday less than three hours after House leaders announced their decision to begin procedures that could lead to impeachment.

Nixon's dramatic decision to obey the order of U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica that he had so long resisted swung the emphasis in the impeachment question to what House Democratic whip John J. McFall of California called "the other half of the problem."

This is Nixon's firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox and assigning of the Watergate investigation to a Justice Department deprived of the two top officials — former Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson and his deputy, William D. Ruckelshaus — who refused to go along with the dismissal of Cox.

The committee's plans call for proceeding with both the impeachment inquiry and consideration of the vice presidential nomination of Rep. Gerald R. Ford, R-Mich.

Speaker Carl Albert, D-Okla., told newsmen he hopes Ford's confirmation can be handled first.

Several members echoed an opinion that the Democratic-dominated Congress would be accused of partisanship if it institutes impeachment proceedings before a Republican successor to Nixon is installed. Until there is a vice president, Albert remains next in line of succession.

"I hope this will lead to a resolution and satisfy those who have called for full and open disclosure of the facts surrounding Watergate," said Gov. Dan Evans of Washington, also a Republican.

Sen. McGovern, D-S.D., said the news from Washington did not alter his view that impeachment proceedings against Nixon should get under way at once.

Because of the ouster of Cox, "there is just one agency left with a constitutional remedy," McGovern said. "It is the Congress, and the remedy is impeachment."

clear the air down there. I don't know what more anyone could want."

Saying he was pleased with Nixon's decision, Rep. Mark Andrews, R-N.D., said, "of course what he's doing now is what he should have done four months ago."

"It's most bewildering," said Democratic State Chairman Joseph Crangle of New York. "One day he fires a man of integrity he asks the courts for the tapes and two days later he releases them. It's very odd."

"Why in the name of God didn't he do it months ago?" asked Oregon Gov. Tom McCall, a Republican.

Minn., agreed that impeachment moves would be deflated now.

Senate Republican Leader Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania said Nixon did the "eminently right thing" in releasing the tapes, but Scott said he was certain that Nixon's action did not dictate Nixon's impeachment.

"Impeachment didn't move this tough man," Scott said. "But I do believe that public outcry might have helped convince him that the compromise he had tried wasn't working."

New York State Senate Majority Leader Warren M. Anderson, a Republican, said the President's action "ought to

Outlook for Iowa farmers good in spite of wet spring

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — Iowa farmers will find profits up, grain drying easier and transportation for their products more available this year, Secretary of Agriculture Robert Lounsberry predicted Tuesday.

This is in spite of a wet spring that resulted in late planting and generally lower crop yields than were reported a year ago, he said.

Lounsberry attributed much of the farmers' good fortunes to the excellent fall weather experience over the state for the past 10 days.

Last week was "one of the best weeks we've ever had" for harvesting crops, Lounsberry said.

He said that until last week only 6 per cent of Iowa's soybean crop had been harvested. But farmers started getting in their fields as early as Sunday afternoon and worked "practically 24 hours a day to bring in the harvest."

Lounsberry said he spent much of last week traveling in Iowa. "From my personal observation, from 80 to 85 per cent of Iowa's soybeans were harvested in one week's time."

He predicted 95 per cent of the beans would be in by the middle of this week to "about clean up the beans."

In addition, Lounsberry said "a considerable amount" of the state's corn has been harvested in the past week or so.

Last year, an unusually wet fall resulted in most of the grain crops not being harvested until November and December. And then the crops had a high moisture content, resulting in a need for three times the normal amount of fuel to dry the crops, aggravating the fuel shortage.

This autumn started out as another wet one, making farmers apprehensive as the fuel crisis continued.

Lounsberry thinks the past 10 days of dry weather may have saved the farmers this year.

He noted that soybeans are most susceptible to rain, retaining moisture due to precipitation after they had earlier dried in the field.

"Once the corn moisture gets down, rainy weather doesn't cause the corn to pick up much moisture," Lounsberry said, explaining why farmers went all out to harvest their soybeans before starting their corn harvest.

Lounsberry said farmers should not have the difficulty getting their grain shipped this year as last.

He said last year's late harvest left the soybeans and corn competing with wheat for a limited number of boxcars.

"A lot of new cars have been built—somewhere between 17,000 and 20,000 more cars are available this year than last," Lounsberry said.

In addition, covers have been built for open coal cars — pressed into service for grain hauling last year — to prevent the grain from getting wet once it is loaded.

No sodium link to loss of hair

Dear Dr. Lamb — About eight months ago I was placed on a low sodium diet after having a heart attack. I now find that my hair seems to be falling out and wonder if this is because of the limited amount of protein in my diet? If this is the cause, could you suggest a remedy?

Dear Reader — I doubt it is really the cause. Loss of hair is caused by many things, disturbance in hormone balance, inherited tendencies, recent illnesses, a temporary loss from pregnancy and even nervousness can cause it. It is true, however, that a good nutritional program, which includes all the important proteins and vitamins, is essential to hair growth. Hair is specialized protein.

I decided to answer your letter in part because of the very real problem people have in obtaining enough good protein on very strict low salt diets. If you have to severely limit your intake of milk, meat and animal products, all of which contain sodium salt, you could supplement your protein intake with mature soybean seed products. In their dry uncooked state they contain only five milligrams of sodium is 160 grams (3½ ounces). That is the same amount you find in rice, well known to be very low in salt. This amount of soybeans will provide 34 grams of good protein. You can eat them dry roasted, being sure they have not been roasted in oil, and you can add a salt substitute to them if you wish. If you buy them already roasted, be sure they are the unsalted variety.

You can also use gelatin to supplement your total protein intake. I know that many nutritionists think gelatin is a poor protein. It certainly is not a very good source for essential amino acids. BUT it is a good source for general protein needed for the body to manufacture other proteins. One of the classic nutritional experiments that every nutritionist worth his salt (if I may use that expression in this column) should know about is the early demonstration by Osborne and Mendel that rats cannot live or grow on either wheat or gelatin alone, but when fed both together they grew and thrived. So, I don't recommend gelatin as a sole source by any means, but in individuals who must avoid protein sources that also contain salt, or even fat, it is useful, provided the rest of the diet includes enough of the essential amino acids. Of course, gelatin comes from animal protein — meat, poultry, and fish. Wheat protein is deficient in lysine, an essential amino acid, and although gelatin is low in lysine. Between the two they did the job.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I am, a 15-year-old girl and have burned my face several times with a sun lamp. I was wondering if the damage to my skin could cause me to wrinkle at an early age? Also, I have heard that ultra violet rays from the lamp can cause types of cancer. Do they?

Dear Reader — Sunburn and lamps for ultraviolet rays do induce changes in the skin.

Acupuncture test

Dental assistant Debbie Corcoran of the Detroit suburb of Southfield, Mich., recently underwent acupuncture for the sake of curiosity. The needle inserted between the thumb and first finger of her right hand kills any pain in the upper left section of her jaw as her boss, who preferred to be unidentified, tests her gums with a sharp probe. Several Detroit-area dentists have started experimenting with acupuncture as a pain killer, but are not offering it to their patients until Michigan rules on its legality. (UPI)

New technology has changed desert warfare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new technology of the fourth Mideast war has made it certain desert warfare will never be the same again.

The classic picture of large numbers of tanks clashing freely across the sands and supported by low-flying fighter planes and infantrymen appears to be obsolete.

Those free-wheeling tactics, witnessed in the 1967 six-day Mideast war, have been replaced by the relative caution evidenced by both sides before the cease-fire was declared Monday.

The need for more caution is one reason why the fighting continued for 17 days instead of six.

Take airplanes, for example. Nearly all of the approximately 100 U.S.-supplied F4 Phantoms, A4 Sky Hawks and other fighters lost by the Israelis were downed by Soviet-made ground-to-air missiles.

American planes were challenged by Soviet missiles in North Vietnam, but never at the low altitudes where Israeli jets attempted to support the Israeli counterattack against the initial Egyptian tank thrust across the Suez Canal.

The United States is known to have equipment which when installed in fighter planes can neutralize the radar-controlled Soviet missiles. It is not known how much of that equipment was supplied or in use by the Israelis before or after the new fighting began.

Another surprise to the Israeli tank forces were the appearance of Syrian and Egyptian infantrymen carrying Soviet antitank weapons on their backs.

By all accounts reaching the Pentagon, the RPG7s, as they are called, were fired with deadly accuracy by determined Arab troops. They often moved in advance of their own tanks to aim their weapons at Israeli armor.

In both cases, Israeli tanks were frequently slowed by the fear that they would encounter the Soviet-made antitank weapons even after Arab tanks had been destroyed in large numbers, Pentagon analysts say.

Events surrounding Nixon's tape decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — At midday Monday, surrounded by the sounds of miscalculation, President Nixon slowly climbed the steep steps of the Executive Office Building.

Often in the past he had bounded up the steps two at a time. But now he was burdened with perhaps the worst crisis of his presidency, and he was heading for his hideaway office to search for a solution.

From Pennsylvania Avenue, 50 yards across the lawn, the President could hear the blaring of automobile horns as motorists responded to a demonstrator's "Honk for Impeachment" sign.

It was a raucous reminder that his earlier decision to seek a compromise on the Watergate tapes — a decision he hoped would bring a national sigh of relief — had instead brought what an aide called "some kind of a nightmare ... a fire storm."

"A miscalculation," his White House counsel now bluntly calls the decision to force through a resolution of the month-long tapes dispute.

Twenty-four hours after his walk up the steps of the office building, Nixon reached another decision. He would capitulate and surrender the Watergate tapes and documents to a federal judge — an abrupt turnabout announced in court Tuesday afternoon.

From presidential aides and other official and unofficial sources, the events leading to Nixon's turnabout can be reconstructed. The sources indicated these were the major factors leading to the President's decision:

—A warning by leading Republicans in Congress that he faced a serious impeachment effort and that even some faithful Capitol Hill followers were reluctant to defend him vigorously so long as he refused to release the tapes.

—A recognition that the public outcry resulting from the firing Saturday night of special Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox was much greater than had been expected, and that it was overshadowing his agreement to allow limited access to the tapes.

—High level concern that the domestic turmoil was damaging efforts to negotiate an end to the Middle East war and was hurting the President's image as a world leader.

Nixon's decision to turn over the tapes for inspection by U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica was made at about noon on Tuesday and came as a stunning surprise to even some of his closest aides. "I was thunderstruck — I couldn't believe it," said one aide, who has in the past prided himself on an ability to read the presidential mind.

Alexander M. Haig Jr., Nixon's chief of staff, was among the few aware of the President's movement toward capitulation on the tapes issue. He said the decision was reached "after very painful and anguishing discussion."

On Monday, Oct. 15, Nixon had decided he would attempt to resolve the tapes issue, which, according to Haig, "had progressively begun to polarize our body politic."

"Lines were clearly being drawn both within the Congress and ... within the viewpoint of the American people themselves," Haig said.

So, as time began running out on Nixon to file his notice of appeal to the Supreme Court, he came up with a compromise: He would personally prepare a summary of the nine tapes, have it verified by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss., and turn it over to both Judge Sirica and the Senate Watergate committee.

According to presidential aides, it was clear by Thursday that Cox would not go along with the compromise, and Nixon decided Friday morning that "we should attempt to resolve this dreadfully controversial issue ... with or without Professor Cox," Haig said.

Cox announced he would not accept the White House proposal. Cox was fired. Atty. Gen. Elliot L. Richardson resigned, and Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus was fired.

First reaction was quick. By the time Nixon awoke Sunday morning, his staff had compiled a 26-page special report tracing reaction in Congress and in the media. The condemnations were harsh, the words of support few.

By Monday morning, Nixon had a 15-page report disclosing that many of the newspapers that had warmly supported his re-election now were vigorously denouncing him editorially.

Some even called for his impeachment or resignation — sentiment expressed later Monday by the AFL-CIO convention in Miami Beach.

By noon on Monday, it was clear to those close to the President that, as Special Counsel Charles Alan Wright later said, "Clearly, we did miscalculate Friday night."

Nixon spent Tuesday morning in his Oval Office and reached his decision about noon. At 2 p.m., Wright stood before a crowded courtroom and started the nation by announcing the tapes would be turned over to Judge Sirica.

'Tootsie Roll' donation

Four-year-old Stephanie Gardner shows the proper procedure for brushing teeth to Dale Fangohr, program chairman for the mental retardation program, Knights of Columbus Council 831, after Fangohr had presented a check for $642 to the Virginia Flower Child Development Center Tuesday. The check represented 60 per cent of the donations collected by the Knights of Columbus and Sacred Heart High School students during Tootsie Roll Days, Oct. 12-13. The remaining 40 per cent of the funds will go to the state-wide mental retardation program sponsored by the Knights of Columbus. DEATH NOTICES

Henry A. Cook

Funeral services for Henry A. Cook, 85, 1905 Fairview Court, well known retired Pettis County farmer and stockman who died at his home Tuesday morning, will be held at the Ewing Funeral Home at 2 p.m. Thursday. The Rev. James H. Mitchell, pastor of the Camp Branch Baptist Church, will officiate.

Larry Owen, soloist, will be accompanied by Mrs. R. N. Gorrell at the organ.

Honorary pallbearers will be Stanley Haggard, Henry Salveter, Robert Rissler, Norval Lane, Dr. A. L. Lowe and Raymond Neitzert.

Active pallbearers will be Ed Poppinga, R. N. Gorrell, Lelan Fulk, Milton Lazenby, Clarence E. Wells and Edward Ficken.

Burial will be in the Memorial Park Cemetery.

The body is at the funeral home where the family will receive friends from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

Venue change is granted in murder case

The case of Kim Eugene Phillips was moved from Pettis County to Boone County Circuit Court Wednesday after Phillips entered an innocent plea to second-degree murder charges in Circuit Court here.

Phillips, 21, a former airman at Whiteman AFB, is charged with the Aug. 13 strangulation death of Mrs. Karen Jones, 16, at her apartment at 1218 East Fifth.

Pettis County Circuit Court Judge Frank Meyer ordered that Phillips be transferred to the Boone County jail in Columbia.

In a petition for a change of venue, Phillips contended that he could not receive a fair and impartial trial in Pettis County or any adjacent county because of publicity concerning the case.

When asked by Judge Meyer where he thought the case should be moved, Phillips replied, "Boone County is sufficient." Phillips attorney, Adam Fischer, earlier had recommended Boone County.

Earlier, when Judge Meyer asked whether he would plead guilty or not guilty to the charge, Phillips answered, "Not guilty, your honor."

Phillips remains in the Pettis County jail in lieu of $25,000 bond. He was arrested Aug. 16 in Sedalia.

In another case, Larry Blackburn, 33, was granted a change of venue from Pettis County to Linn County Circuit Court. Blackburn is charged with passing a no funds check of $8.45 on July 30 at a Derby service station here. He remains in the county jail in lieu of $1,500 bond.

Judge Meyer ordered that Blackburn be transferred to a jail in Keytesville in Chariton County.

Group to decide spending of funds

The Region 13 Law Enforcement Council will meet in Warrensburg tonight to decide how to budget $150,898 in federal funds.

Pettis County Deputy Sheriff Jim Lawson, a member of the council, said the organization must submit its spending proposals to the state council by the end of the month.

The Region 13 council consists of law enforcement agencies in Johnson, Pettis and Lafayette Counties.

The state council Oct. 17 approved an allocation of $150,898 to the region.

The Sedalia police department, the Pettis County sheriff's department and the district juvenile office all have requested a share of the funds for additional manpower or equipment purchases.

Circuit Court trial dates next for two

Two persons were bound over for trial to Pettis County Circuit Court Wednesday after they appeared in Magistrate Court.

Bound over were Anita Olga Tillman, 23, Kansas City, charged with stealing merchandise valued at more than $50; and Bernard C. Falk, 66, a former Sedalian, charged with stealing more than $50.

Falk waives his preliminary hearing. A hearing for the Tillman woman was held, however.

She was arrested by Sedalia police Oct. 13 after she allegedly took $146 in clothing from the Conner-Wagoner store, 414 South Ohio. James Michael Bell, 24, Kansas City, also was charged with stealing in connection with the incident. However, prosecuting Attorney Gary Fleming dismissed the charge against Bell Wednesday.

But then the prosecutor filed a similar stealing charge against both Bell and the Tillman woman, alleging that they stole more than $50 worth of clothing from Montgomery Ward Co., 400 South Osage, on Oct. 13. A preliminary hearing date on this charge was set for Nov. 6.

Bell remains in the county jail in lieu of $5,000 bond. The Tillman woman also is in jail, in lieu of two $5,000 bonds.

Falk is charged with stealing a check for $80 on Oct. 1, 1971, made out to the Broadway Arms Apartments. He is free on $1,500 bond.

Tax review is requested by local man

A Sedalia man, who was told by the State Department of Revenue this summer to pay $1,984.64 in sales tax allegedly owed to the city and state, has asked that the dispute be reviewed in Pettis County Circuit Court.

A petition asking the court to review the case has been filed by Cal Rodgers Jr., owner of Cal Rodgers Sales and Service Co., 3031 South Limit.

According to the petition, Rodgers says he was told by the Revenue Department that he failed to file correct tax returns to both the city and state for sales tax money from July 1 to Dec. 31 last year.

Members of the Bureau of Sales Tax Auditors had previously made an audit of the business, the petition states.

The petition also stated that Rodgers protested the Revenue Department's findings at a reassessment hearing July 2 before Sidney Wright, supervisor of the Division of Compliance. Eight days later, a decision was handed down in favor of the Revenue Department, according to the petition.

Rodgers asks in the petition that the court postpone the Revenue Department's order until a final determination of the case is made in court.

Rodgers says the decision against him went against the evidence presented and is in violation of the federal and state constitution and state statutes.

Tuesday in court, Mark D. Mittleman, an assistant state attorney general, filed a motion on behalf of the Revenue Department to have the case dismissed from court.

He said that the review petition was not filed within 30 days after the decision was rendered by Wright, as is required. He also contended the petition should be dismissed because it does not name the director of the Revenue Department as defendant and, instead, names the entire department.

According to the petition, the Revenue Department contends that Rodgers owes the state $1,045.10 plus $44.39 interest, and the city $860.04 plus $35.11 interest.

Maplewood Church to hold conference

Maplewood Church, Route 2, will hold its third annual Missionary Conference Wednesday through Sunday at the church.

The featured speaker for the kickoff meeting at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday will be the Rev. Jerry Voss, a missionary to Guadeloupe. He also will show slides of his ministry there.

Last July, 35 members of Maplewood Church spent about a week at Mr. Voss's church in the West Indies and helped construct a church building.

The Rev. and Mrs. Mike Stoltz, missionaries to Paraguay, will be the featured speakers at services at 7:30 p.m. Thursday and Friday.

A men's prayer breakfast will be held at 7:30 a.m. Saturday at State Fair Restaurant.

Mr. Stoltz will preach at the 10:45 a.m. Sunday worship service and also at an "around-the-world banquet" at 5:30 p.m. Sunday.

The entire missionary conference is open to the public. Persons who wish to attend the banquet should call before Friday at 826-4146 or 826-6735.

Electric equipment taken from shed

An electric saw and a power lawn edger were taken from a shed at the rear of a garage owned by Edgar B. Smith, 507 State Fair. Mrs. Smith reported the theft to police Tuesday, but did not know when the tools, valued at $125, had been taken.

Mrs. Smith told police that the lock on the shed had been broken to gain entry.

Mobile home park dispute is aired

A dispute between residents and the owner of Heritage Village Mobile Home Park, which originally surfaced at the Oct. 1 City Council session, was the subject of discussion at a special council meeting Tuesday night at the Municipal Building.

Attending were Dr. James Houchens, a resident of the park; park manager Jerry Goodsen, Mayor Jerry Jones, City License Inspector Bob Brown, City Building Inspector Woodrow Garrison and City Counselor Robert Fritz.

At the earlier council meeting, Houchens claimed that alleged overcrowding had developed at the park following its purchase last spring by Ellis Garner, Columbia. Houchens also criticized Garner for allegedly selling mobile homes at the park in violation of city zoning regulations.

Although he did not attend the council session, Garner earlier contended that city regulations calling for trailers to be at least 12 feet apart did not apply to the park because it was established and annexed before the law took effect in 1971.

Such a situation, in which a violation of a city law existed in an area before it was annexed or before the particular law took effect, comes under a "non-conforming" clause that permits the practice to continue even though it violates a city ordinance.

However, Tuesday night, Fritz clarified the situation, stating that, the "non-conforming" status of the park does not apply with regard to the aspects of the current city mobile home ordinance covering health, sanitation or welfare.

These aspects, Fritz said, include provisions specifying the size of lots and distance between trailers. Mobile homes already 10 feet apart, and on 35-by-70 foot lots will not be affected. However, new mobile homes in the park will have to be located 12 feet apart and on lots at least 45-by-90 feet.

It was also determined at the Tuesday night meeting that Garner is violating city zoning standards by selling trailer homes in the park, which is presently zoned R-1 (residential). However, it was agreed to permit the sale of mobile homes providing Garner take immediate steps to request a rezoning of the property to at least C-1 (small business).

Commenting on the results of the meeting Wednesday, Houchens said he was "satisfied, but I still don't fully understand how they can be 'non-conforming' and yet still be subject to a certain segment of the current ordinance."

Nixon's emotional stability attacked

WASHINGTON (AP) — AFL-CIO President George Meany said today President Nixon appears to suffer from "dangerous emotional instability."

The White House quickly called Meany's charge "incredible, inexcusable and irresponsible" and declared that Nixon's health is excellent.

The sharp White House response came within minutes after Meany called again for Nixon's resignation or impeachment and raised questions about Nixon's current emotional state.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren called Meany's assertions "one of the most incredible, inexcusable, irresponsible ever made by an individual who is in a position to have his remarks and comments carried in the national news media."

Asked to describe Nixon's current health, Warren responded: "Excellent."

Tapes may never be aired publicly

WASHINGTON (AP)—Don't plan to spend an evening anytime soon listening to the Watergate tapes.

The court order President Nixon promised to obey in a surprise decision on Tuesday puts the tapes in the hands of U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica.

The judge will listen to them in secret and decide if they can be turned over to the grand jury.

If they are, even the Senate Watergate committee would not be able to hear them. Grand jury evidence is protected by strict secrecy rules.

The first time they are likely to become part of a public record, if they ever do, would be as a result of pretrial motion by a defendant or during a Watergate trial.

The time when Sirica will receive the tapes also was left uncertain.

The appeals court altered Sirica's original order to permit the President to withhold material he considers foreign policy or national defense information.

Any material of that nature that he wishes to withhold must be indexed and itemized and the President's lawyers would have to prepare to defend such decisions if challenged by the prosecutors.

The need to prepare them for the submission was the reason the President's lawyer could only assure the judge that he will be "even the tapes" as expeditiously as possible.

Second civil suit facing local firm

A civil suit seeking payment of $11,604.15 was filed in Pettis County Circuit Court Tuesday by Howard Ready Mixed Concrete Co., 1326 West Main, naming the Dean Construction Co., 501 East Second, as defendant.

The suit alleges that the construction company owes the concrete company the amount for materials previously purchased.

The petition contends that the Dean Construction Co. purchased material worth $63,493.52 and has to date paid $51,889.37.

Last week Howard Quarries, West Highway 50, filed a similar suit against the Dean Construction Co., seeking $7,273, the alleged amount owed the plaintiff.

New Human Rights commissioner named

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Gov. Christopher S. Bond today named Mrs. Elaine Spearman of St. Louis a member of the Missouri Human Rights Commission.

She replaces Mrs. Thelma Watson Watt, whose term expired.

Mrs. Spearman, 27, is administrative assistant in the lead poison evaluation center, St. Louis Division of Health.

She holds a bachelor's degree in social administration from Tennessee State University in Nashville, where she was graduated in 1967.

be presented to a grand jury. They likely will become public this way only if presented as evidence at a trial.

—The Senate Watergate committee was back in court fighting its own separate, uphill battle for the tapes. Sirica had ruled that the committee, unlike Cox, had no legal authority to use the courts to get the tapes.

Previously, it appeared the committee had struck a deal with the White House and would settle for an edited transcript of the tapes, authenticated by Sen. John C. Stennis, D-Miss.

But the panel appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court for full access, denied that it had made any deal not to continue the suit, and told Nixon there appeared to be confusion about the terms of the compromise agreement.

After that, and after Nixon gave in on the tapes Cox had sought, the White House withdrew its offer to the committee.

—Crucial questions remained unanswered about the future of the Justice Department's newly inherited inquiries into the Watergate and related matters. It wasn't known if prosecutors would be allowed to get any presidential tapes or papers besides those Nixon agreed to give Sirica.

There also were reports that the staff of the special prosecution force was prepared to resign as a group.

—Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said the decision to release the White House tapes would deflate congressional impeachment moves. Humphrey said he still favored a new special Watergate prosecutor, to be named either by Sirica or by Congress.

—Cox himself vowed to remain in Washington for the time being. "I know all citizens will be happy, as I am, that the President wisely chose to respect the rule of law," he said.

—Also in doubt was whether Nixon would supply tapes sought in the Vesco case. Former Cabinet members John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans face trial in New York on charges interfering with a government investigation in return for a secret $200,000 campaign contribution from financier Robert L. Vesco.

Nixon apparently reached his eventual decision after being told that House Republicans would not defend him strongly unless he turned over the tapes.

Reliable sources said important GOP congressmen, including John B. Anderson of Illinois, John J. Rhodes of Arizona and Leslie C. Arends of Illinois, gave that word to presidential counselor Bryce Harlow at a meeting Tuesday morning.

Before that, Nixon had intended to fight the matter by claiming he had settled the dispute out of court by firing his adversary, Cox.

Papers had been filed with Sirica. But, at noon, Nixon informed his chief courtroom lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, that he would produce the tapes.

About the same time, several impeachment resolutions were being introduced in the House. House Speaker Carl Albert referred them to the Judiciary Committee, which announced a preliminary inquiry into whether the evidence warranted a move to impeach Nixon.

Barely two hours later, in Sirica's packed, hushed courtroom, Wright announced that the papers he had filed with the judge were being withdrawn and that the President would comply with the appeals court order to give Sirica the tapes.

"This President does not defy the law, and he has authorized me to say he will comply in full with the orders of the court," Wright said.

Israelis

lines — was reported calm a few hours after the truce went into effect.

A spokesman for the Egyptian army liaison with the U.N. truce observers said a 41-man force from Argentina, Austria, Chile, Finland, France, Ireland and Sweden left Cairo in three groups for their cease-fire posts along the Suez front.

It was not immediately known how the reported outburst of new fighting would affect their mission.

The Israeli state radio said earlier that Dayan had proposed the observers take the main roads from Cairo to Ismailia and Suez until they met the Israeli forces on the west bank of the canal.

Moments after announcing the truce, Israel reported that in fighting between the first and second cease-fires its troops extended their beachhead on the west bank of the Suez to Port Suez, at the southern end of the canal, and to Adabiya, 11 miles south of Suez on the coast.

The Israelis said this advance surrounded the Egyptian 3rd Army east of the canal and cut all communication routes between Port Suez and Cairo.

Israeli press reports said 20,000 Egyptian troops and 200 tanks were caught in the encirclement.

Egypt, meanwhile, reported that fighting intensified late Tuesday, especially west of the canal, as a result of the "enemy pushing new reinforcements."

Both Egypt and Israel had ordered their troops to stop fighting late Monday afternoon in response to a U.N. Security Council cease-fire resolution adopted early Monday.

But hard fighting continued Tuesday on both the Egyptian and Syrian fronts, and the Security Council issued another cease-fire appeal Tuesday afternoon.

The second resolution urged the Arabs and Israelis to return to the positions they held at the time of the first cease-fire and also asked U.N. observers to be sent to the battle fronts.

The Israeli command said Maj. Gen. Ensi P.H. Silasvuo of Finland, the chief of the U.N. truce observers, contacted Defense Minister Moshe Dayan early today and Dayan asked him to transmit a proposal to Cairo for a 7 a.m. cease-fire.

Israel said the Egyptians' affirmative response was received at 5:45 a.m., an hour and 15 minutes before the cease-fire hour.

Syria, meanwhile, had said it was studying the first cease-fire resolution, and U. N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced Tuesday night that Damascus had agreed to accept the resolution "on the basis that it means withdrawal of Israeli forces from all Arab territories occupied in June 1967 and thereafter, and on the basis of guaranteeing the rights of the Palestinian people."

The Syrian state radio announced the government's action and Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam's message to Waldheim in a broadcast early today.

In fighting Tuesday, Israel claimed it bombed Egyptian troop concentrations on both sides of the Suez Canal, downed five Egyptian planes in dogfights and pushed its beachhead on the west bank of the Suez Canal to within about 50 miles of Cairo.

Gen. Haim Herzog, the military commentator for Tel Aviv radio, attributed much of the fighting to Egyptian efforts to "tidy up" the zigzag cease-fire lines.

Egypt, in what it called "the most vicious fighting since the outbreak of the war," said it shot down seven Israeli jets and had retaken all of the canal's eastern edge except for an Israeli stronghold just north of the Great Bitter Lake.

An Egyptian military correspondent said a group of Israeli reinforcements for the west bank had been "completely surrounded."

Syria said 60 Israeli planes tried to bomb civilian targets north of Damascus and in the Mt. Hermon area but Syrian jets brought down 11 warplanes.

It also claimed artillery strikes against Israeli positions and the destruction of enemy equipment, and claimed it sank an Israeli gunboat while fighting off a naval and helicopter attack on "civilian targets on the coast at Latakia and Banias."

Israel claimed its bombers made "exact hits" on the fuel terminal at Khan Ayish north of Damascus and 10 Syrian planes were shot down in aerial combat.

Israel said Arab terrorists shelled five of its villages on the Lebanese border but caused no casualties or damage.

Car saleswoman is Sedalia's first

By KARLA WALTERS
Women's Editor

Sedalia has a new first — its first car saleswoman. She's Mrs. Peggy Thomas, selling for Town and Country Motors.

Mrs. Thomas only started her career in March and wasn't broken into it by a father or husband. "It isn't by any means a way of women's liberation," she says. The reason she does it, pure and simple, is that she likes it. "And then the little thing called money," she adds with a smile. "When it comes down to it, what else would you work for?"

Mrs. Thomas admits that besides the money, the whole idea of working is getting out, getting away from the house. "I didn't work while my daughter was home," she says. Her daughter, Cindy, was a freshman last year at Central Missouri State University, Warrensburg. "I'm glad I stayed home then. I enjoyed raising her."

Cindy's school activities kept her and her mother busy then. Cindy was a majorette, cheerleader, in 4-H Club and Job's Daughters, and Mrs. Thomas was a 4-H leader, and active in PTA. She belonged to several clubs when her husband, Zeb Thomas, was Western District Judge, but belongs only to Business and Professional Women's Club now.

So how does the experience of a housewife and mother qualify one for selling cars? "You don't have to be a mechanic to sell cars," Mrs. Thomas says. "But you have to know about the size of the motor, the gas ratio, the size of tires, whether it's a six or eight cylinder. These are just a few of the questions they ask you."

"When I took the job, we were all on a trial basis," she says, referring to her boss as well as herself. But I'm very well satisfied.

"I like it," she repeats. "The satisfaction of a person being able to buy a new car. Satisfying people — to me, this is what life is all about."

So far, all her customers have been satisfied to deal with a woman. She has never had to face the problem of someone asking to see a salesman. If she did, she says, "I'd would go get the next best salesman, of course."

Child care

Mrs. Judith Berenyi, teacher in a new child care course at Smith-Cotton High School, right, demonstrates the proper method of bathing a child by using a doll as Carla Jackson, 502 Sunset Drive, a student in the course, looks on. The activity was part of the annual PTA open house Tuesday evening at Smith-Cotton. Mrs. Berenyi said the course is being taken by 48 students who learn pre-natal care and participate in field trips as well as hearing special guest speakers discuss new developments in child care.

Women need wills drawn for protection

BOSTON (AP) — What if a woman precedes her spouse in death?

That's question more women are considering these days, according to W. Scane Bowler, chairman of the board of Pioneer Western Corp., a national financial services organization. "A woman needs to have a properly drawn will just as much as her husband," Bowler said.

He added that keeping a will up to date is also important.

Bowler suggests the following details be given consideration.

— List all real estate a woman owns in her name, its location and value, plus jointly owned property.

— State approximately the real and intrinsic value of paintings, objects d'art, heirlooms or precious jewelry.

— Leave an explicit letter of instruction with the will, indicating all desired arrangements. One example would be educational programs for the children.

— List names of people who should be notified of death. Many women have church, club and business friends who may not be well known to the family.

Big spenders for diet products

NEW YORK (AP) — Forty million American families spend over $1 billion annually on low-calorie foods and beverages, despite current headlines decrying the high cost of food.

The prime item purchased is low-calorie soda pop.

Some 50 million overweight or cholesterol-conscious Americans will go on diets this year, and over 20 million are dieting for health reasons under a doctor's care, according to a study by the Ogden Corp.

Despite the large volume of sales and the nation's overwhelming preoccupation with weight control, the study disclosed wide ignorance and confusion among consumers about specific diet foods. There was also a general absence of accepted authoritative sources on the subject.

Consumers find it harder to shop for diet foods than for regular foods. They say they encounter a lack of interest in their problems in stores, the study disclosed.

Sufferers from heart condition form the largest group of dieters for health reasons. There are 27 million American cardiovascular patients, according to the National Heart Association. Five million diabetics — and 45 million carriers of the disease — form the second largest group, according to the National Diabetes Foundation.

Current statistics of the U.S. Public Health Service indicate that over half of adult men and 40 per cent of adult women are at least 10 per cent overweight.

Although this figure counts some people twice — people with heart conditions, for example, may also be overweight — it omits millions of Americans who restrict their diets for other reasons.

Marketing programs for diet foods achieved nearly equal success in states as different as New York and Missouri, the study said, regardless of whether the organization involved was a chain store or a wholesale outlet.

Diet foods' popularity has increased steadily in the last few years, although the increase varies by product classification.

The 200 million Americans spend on dietetic items other than soda last year included money for diet fruit, sweeteners, dressings, spreads and syrups and $114 million for other low-calorie items.

Meals on Wheels explained to group

Sedalia's Meals on Wheels Program was explained by its director, Mrs. Bill Dick, at a Monday evening dinner meeting of the local chapter of Alpha Delta Kappa, national honorary society for women educators, at the Old Missouri Homestead.

Mrs. Dick explained to the 17 members present that the program served 15,160 meals last year and that 129 persons had received meals this year.

She said 21 different churches and several civic groups delivered the meals, as well as providing other minor services for participants.

Mrs. Dick said the hot meal program service was available to elderly of all income levels.

Sorority news

A home interior show will be held at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 6 at the Farm and Home Building, sponsored by the Xi Beta Upsilon Chapter of Beta Sigma Phi. It was announced at the club's dinner meeting Monday at the Old Missouri Homestead. Approximately 24 persons attended the meeting highlighted by an exchange of anniversary gifts.

Polly's pointers

Wants advice on synthetics

By POLLY CRAMER
Polly's problem

DEAR POLLY — I am thirteen and enjoy sewing very much but have a problem when sewing thin materials, especially synthetics. How can I keep the seams from gathering or drawing? — SANDY.

Congratulations, Sandy, how we do admire a thirteen-year-old who enjoys and does sewing. It will always mean so much to you to have this interest. I am sure many of the readers will want to help you. — POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — Here is a Pet Peeve from another of your many male readers. As a victim of arthritis I defy anyone to open a bottle of aspirin fitted with the push-turn top which supposedly prevents children from opening them. I had to ask a neighbor to help me and then I poured the supply into a screw-type bottle. Needless to say my future purchases of aspirin will not be the brand that uses this type of lid. — FRANK.

DEAR POLLY — Demis can remove the water spots from her plastic drinking glasses by putting one teaspoon of baking soda in a glass and then filling it to the brim with hot water. Let it set all night. Next morning use a vegetable brush or swish a dish cloth around in each one and they will be good as new. — MICHELLE.

DEAR POLLY — I have help for Demis who wants to remove water spots from plastic glasses. Soak them for several hours in a mixture of half water and half white vinegar and they will come sparkling clean. — MARLIES.

DEAR POLLY — Storage space is at a minimum in my apartment. For summer barbecues I bought a hibachi-type grill that is more easily stored than larger models. I found that by wetting a paper towel with salad oil and running it over the front and back of the cooking grates before barbecuing that the grates could be easily washed after it is used. Soapy water does it without scrubbing. Our grill is always ready for the next cook out, for storage or for packing in the trunk of the car. — MRS. D.

Durable press not so simple

Q — Is there any way to process clothes at home to give them a permanent press? What is the best way to care for permanent-press clothes? — Mrs. H. N., Phoenix, Ariz.

A — According to Dr. Dorothy S. Lyle at the International Fabricare Institute, "There is no simple home procedure for making durable press garments... it's too expensive and requires high temperatures."

If you have to alter a permanent-press garment at home, you'll run into the problem of not being able to remove the crease. Sometimes it's possible to remove the crease by putting a damp cloth over the fabric and ironing it. This causes a "heat shift" in the polyester fiber used in durable press garments. Unfortunately, it doesn't always work.

Heat and rough handling can change the color of durable press clothes or can give them a wrinkled, unpressed look. Don't let durable press clothes overdry. Take them out when they're damp-warm.

The polyester used in durable press blended fabrics is vulnerable to oily stains. If a garment is stained (even with the oils from the body), don't launder, dry or iron with heat. Try to remove the stain first with heavy, liquid detergent. If this doesn't work, send the garment to the cleaners. Heat will set the grease stains in durable press clothes.

Q — We bought a 1970 model car about six months ago. It had 32,000 miles on it and was sold with a 50,000 mile warranty. We didn't receive any warranty papers and we've had a lot of mechanical trouble with the car. We're wondering if the seller could have moved the mileage back? — Mrs. D. H., Fairmont, Minn.

A — It's entirely possible. The federal government has a regulation which requires the seller to sign a statement attesting to the car's true mileage. Unfortunately, some unscrupulous dealers are getting around this by requiring the first owner to sign a card with a lower mileage listed. Then the odometer is turned back (or past zero and up again) to the new, lower mileage. If you don't go along, they won't buy your car.

If there is any warranty left on a used car be sure to apply for and receive an authorized transfer of warranty (usually costs around $25). You can check the hard plastic seal which holds the back of the odometer together. If this is broken or has been tampered with, watch out. If the numbers don't line up correctly, this is another sign of tampering. When in doubt, have the car checked by an independent garage before you buy.

Q — A while back my wife and I bought a home site in the desert area of Southern California from one of these land "investment" companies. Nobody seems to know the value of the land. We think we might have been taken. Do we have any recourse in the matter? — G. O., Mt. View, Calif.

A — Federal Land Sales Administrator George F. Bernstein says you do have recourse if: (1) you were not given a copy of the official "property report" filed with the government; or (2) were not given correct and truthful information (claims of a clubhouse when none exists, for example).

If the company complied with the above rules or if the company is selling less than 50 lots or is selling lots of five acres or larger in size, you don't have much recourse. Always get a property report and read it carefully before you sign anything. These reports will state what improvements, if any, have been made on the property and what utilities, if any, exist.

You can register a complaint against a seller who may have broken the rules by writing: George K. Bernstein, Federal Land Sales Administrator, HUD, Washington, D.C. 20410.

More information sought on charges

KANSAS CITY (AP) — City Councilman Sal Capra wants more specifics on federal charges of mail fraud that are pending against him.

A federal grand jury issued two indictments against him Aug. 28 charging that he used the mails to defraud by mailing false Missouri sales tax returns for two taverns in Kansas City in which he had an interest.

A motion for a bill of particulars was filed in U.S. District Court by two of his attorneys Tuesday. It asks for a "concise, detailed and factual statement of the relevant facts and evidence which would support the defendant's conviction."

It asserted the language in the indictments is too general to properly inform Capra of the charges against him.

The Swedish copper 10-daler coins of 1659 weighed 43.5 pounds.

Dear Hers: The solution is simple. Wear lipstick. Get out of the jeans. Put on a skirt and blouse or a dress and some earrings. No one will ever call you "son" or "young man" again.

U.N. food authority touches tender nerve

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — A United Nations food authority has touched on a tender nerve—food shortages in poor countries—which has rarely been exposed by Nixon administration officials who have cited repeatedly the economic advantages to farmers of high grain prices caused by record grain exports.

Dr. Addeke H. Boerma, director-general of the U.N.'s Food and Agriculture Organization, put it this way:

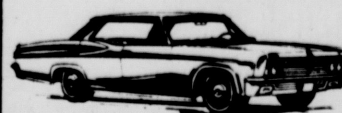

"The rise in prices has two sides to it. Looked at in one way, it benefits exporting countries, not only in the developed, but in the developing world."

"But when it comes to the harmful effects—the increasingly heavier costs of food for ordinary people, the developing countries are much worse off than the developed."

In other words, according to Boerma, the world prices of wheat and other food grains have risen so much that many poor nations cannot afford enough to feed their people.

Boerma, whose comments were in a speech Tuesday night at an International Development conference here, called upon the United States and Russia to support his plan for setting up what he called a "minimum level of world food security" through a buildup of grain reserves to handle future food crisis situations.

Water frustrates Boonville farmers

By LARRY CLARK
Boonville Daily News
For The Associated Press
BOONVILLE, Mo. (AP)—In the flood plains of the Missouri River above and below Boonville, farmers are frustrated, desperate and angry.

They cannot remember a spell of real good farming weather since the early summer of 1972. Through the middle of last week their crops were deep in flood water as the Missouri rose seven and eight feet above its banks.

Levees weakened by months of heavy rains had given way, or the holes washed through them by last spring's high water had not been repaired. The farmers were angry with the Army Engineers about that.

Oliver Sieckmann and Here Woodridge estimated $1 million worth of crops were under water in their Overton Bottoms area on the south side of Interstate 70 about 15 miles downstream from Boonville.

Arch Chrisman estimated he had 50 acres of corn under water.

These were typical of reports after 14 levees were breached between Glasgow, about 30 miles upstream, and McBaine, about 30 miles downstream.

Even though the Missouri has subsided and there has been no rain for a week, the crops may be gone.

"What happens from here on has a lot to do with it," said Joe Adams, regional agronomist for the farm extension service.

"If it dries up, the crops are still harvestable. If the crops were knocked down by swift currents, there is not much you can do. A lot of people anticipated this thing and crops have been wetted."

Some wet corn has germinated on the stalk and is useless.

For some farmers, it will be the second crop in a row that they have lost.

No rain and searing temperatures had almost ruined crops in wide areas of Missouri in the late summer of 1972 when the downpours suddenly started. Within two weeks, the crops were fine but the fields were so soft that harvesting equipment only bogged down.

A foul winter was followed by an unusually wet spring. The rains sent the lower Missouri and its tributaries surging out of their banks and gorged the Mississippi until it flooded.

The rains tapered off into a perfect summer for growing crops, even though they got a late start; but another siege of rains started about Sept. 8, capped by deluges which measured eight, nine and ten inches over much of northern and central Missouri on Oct. 9-11.

"It will hurt the farmers for a long time, even if they get their crops out," said Rex Myers, executive director of the Cooper County office of the Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Service.

"It seems like everybody works on borrowed money. This is the second year of bad weather and heavy borrowing to cover increased expenses."

As the flood waters rose two weeks ago, farmers who could manage to get into their fields cut corn and soybeans and grain sorghums feverishly.

"Last fall, everybody expected it to stop raining," Adams said. "Farmers are not waiting for Mother Nature to cooperate any more than necessary this year. It is more expensive to get it out early, but if you lose a crop it's all gone."

Farmers who couldn't get at their crops manned the dikes, with help from the Missouri Training School for Boys, Kemper Military Academy and even the county jail.

A levee broke on the Bill Walters farm and water poured into the Overton bottoms.

Mrs. Hazel Fenton watched as it rose relentlessly into her soybean field. A combine raced back and forth at the far end of the field, cutting all the beans it could. Mrs. Fenton estimated the farmers had used 150,000 sandbags in an effort to save the levy. A secondary dike which would have helped still had a hole in it from last spring.

"Any thing that has been done since the spring floods, we had to do," Mrs. Fenton said. "We tried everything to get the Army Engineers to fix this be-

Miner's son favors strip mine reclamation

WASHINGTON (AP)—One of the relatively few members of the House subcommittees now taking up strip mine reclamation legislation with a directly affected constituency is Joe Skubitz, a Kansas Republican.

Skubitz 67, was the son of a miner, an Austro-Hungarian immigrant. He grew up wanting to be a miner until his father gave him a particularly bitter taste of coal mining life one summer.

"I believe that all the strip mines in Kansas are in my district," Skubitz said in a recent interview. "I've seen that country just raped by the coal companies and nothing done to restore it, to put it back in production and back on the tax rolls."

Skubitz carries a low, 16 per cent "pro" vote rating from the League of Conservation Voters and a reputation in some circles back home as pro-strip mining. That does not mesh with his stated views on the subject and his memories of name-calling bouts with mine-company owners over the years.

Skubitz has built a record of investigating support for reclamation of the gray, fallow gashes across the flat land of his southeastern Kansas district.

But he has voted against proposed federal legislation that puts too much detail in its environmental-based restrictions because, he said, they should be "general in nature, minimum standards" with states setting tighter regulations according to the local situation.

Skubitz pointed out that "Kansas is different" while West Virginia strip mines cut away sides of mountains to tap 30-foot coal beds, the deposits in his district are shallow. Regulations must be tailored to those differences, he said.

In 1967, he went to state leaders with a reclamation law, which eventually passed with his strong support, and then sought one at the federal level "since they were not acting fast enough."

"I'm not a strict environmentalist," said Skubitz, whose fore the fall rains. We knew it would be like this.

"Repairs should have been done immediately. I guess that's the way the government works. It's all the red tape they go through. It's cost us around $10,000 to build temporary levees to hold this flood."

Arch Chrisman added: "If they spent half as much time working on the banks of the river as they do the channel, we wouldn't have any trouble."

While the bottomland farmers are the hardest hit, those on the hills also have suffered from all the wet weather.

Heavy rains washed debris into their fields. Some of it was the crops they lost last fall and winter. There was a lot of soil erosion.

They had to cancel fall plowing, losing the advantage of the natural tilling done by the freezing and thawing of winter. The seedbed wasn't very good when farmers did manage to get crops planted between the spring thunder storms. Most of them didn't plow — just disced and harrowed.

"There are more corn and beans out of the fields and in the bins than at this time last year due to the fact that farmers are not going to wait and see this year," Adams said.

The bottomland farmers face big bills for the emergency work on their levees. They have cut back on their buying and it has been reflected in Boonville, where 50 per cent of a merchant's income is probably dependent directly or indirectly on farming.

Now there has been a week of hard sunshine.

"Two weeks would be even better," Adams said. "The prospects for a crop this year are good in spite of the weather."

Finds new space

In recent years, bumper stickers have become a popular way for some people to express their sentiments on political developments or social movements. But for those who don't own cars, or for faddists who may have run out of bumper space, one youth seems to have found a solution. Singer wants fans to forget her song

By ALAN WILSON
Associated Press Writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Jeanne Pruett, an Alabama farm girl who struggled for 10 years to attain stardom in country music, says she'd like her fans to forget the song that brought her success.

"Somebody asked if I have a record to follow 'Satin Sheets,' I said, 'I hope not.' I want a song that'll make everybody forget about 'Satin Sheets,'" said the 36-year-old singer.

"I want to grow and continue to do different music. When I write, I strive more for quality than quantity."

"Satin Sheets" has done more to bring instant success to a female country singer than anything before it—with perhaps the exception of Jeanne C. Riley's "Harper Valley PTA."

It earned Miss Pruett four nominations in this year's annual country music awards.

Unlike Miss Riley's career which failed to produce a follow-up hit, Jeanne Pruett shows no signs of letting up. But for this outspoken person, maintaining her popularity is of secondary concern. Uppermost in her mind is respect.

"I'm going to respect the people in the industry. But at the same time I am going to demand respect from them. Now they listen, and before they didn't," she said.

Before "Satin Sheets" came along, Miss Pruett's career was mostly in writing and an occasional song.

"It's (success) changed my life so if I see a car, a ring or something, I can buy it. It hasn't changed the small town girl who grew up on a farm," she said.

"I feel a conviction. I'm totally committed to music and I'm committed to doing it my way. When I say I'm a nonconformist, I mean it, but not in a rebel way."

There was a time when Miss Pruett wouldn't even let anyone see her writing, much less hear her singing. She grew up in Calhoun County, Ala., where she had developed an ear for music by age 5. But developing confidence was another matter.

"I had 25 songs finished in the early '60s and never had shown them to anyone. I had been married for 10 years and even my husband knew nothing about the songs," she said.

One he saw Jeanne's work, her husband wasted no time in getting the songs to country star Marty Robbins. Robbins recorded several of them and from then on Jeanne had a career.

School for retarded is aided by coupons

WASHINGTON (AP) — Jill Ruckelshaus, wife of dismissed Deputy Atty. Gen. William D. Ruckelshaus, will continue as head of the women's division at the White House "for the present," the White House says.

Ruckelshaus was dismissed when he refused to obey President Nixon's order to fire special prosecutor Archibald Cox in a dispute over the Watergate tapes.

Presidential counselor Anne Armstrong, who conferred with Mrs. Ruckelshaus after the dismissal, said Tuesday: "While her family's plans are not yet definite, I am delighted that for the present she will continue in her position as head of the women's division."

Mrs. Ruckelshaus has been working part-time under Mrs. Armstrong.

TOKYO (AP) — Emperor Hirohito, a marine biologist, and Empress Nagako have entertained zoo directors from about 20 nations at an Imperial Palace tea.

The emperor talked about an hour with the zoo directors, who are in Tokyo for an international zoo conference.

PAOLA, Kan. (AP) — People in each of the 50 states, senders of 1.7 million coupons, have a stake in the 12-passenger school van and the playground equipment at Lakemary Center here for trainable-retarded children.

Responding to a program initiated three years ago by the foster mother of one of those children, people began mailing Betty Crocker coupons which General Mills valued at one-half cent each.

Mrs. Walter Vitt of St. Paul, Kan., mother of eight ranging from 14 months to 19 years, had sought a way to help Lakemary because she was financially unable to provide for the expensive clinical care and special education required by her foster son, Marvin Kavanaugh.

After learning of the coupon program and determining the van bus costing $5,648 would require 1,129,749 coupons, Mrs. Vitt began her campaign.

"I got the need publicized by writing newspapers all over the United States asking for help and coupons started coming from everywhere — all 50 states and even from the Canal Zone and Heidelberg, Germany," she said. "Our local mail carrier had us add a second box in our yard to accommodate all our mail."

Stabbing death probe continuing

EDWARDSVILLE, Ill. (AP) — The Madison County sheriff's office was continuing its investigation today into the stabbing death of Edward J. Buehmann, 71.

Sheriff John Maeras said the body was found by Buehmann's wife, Velma, at their home in Worden Monday night. He died of stab wounds of the chest, Maeras said.

Luck finally changes for New York actor

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer
LOS ANGELES (AP) — For seven years, Jason Miller's Irish luck seemed to have escaped him.

He acted in off-Broadway shows in New York at $70 a week, hardly enough to support his wife and three young children. In the dull stretches between jobs, he tried his hand at writing plays, but his efforts attracted scant interest.

Last year Miller's luck changed. His play, "That Championship Season," became a Broadway hit and won the Pulitzer, Drama Critics and Tony awards. He was chosen to play the title role in the film "The Exorcist" and is now starring in another film, "The Nickel Ride."

"Yes, there were moments when I was close to despair," says Miller. "But I tried not to think of the odds that were against me. My wife was terrific through it all. She never complained, never despaired. I received an enormous amount of support from her."

"I got through. And when it happens the way it happened to me, you feel you have earned it. It's much better than overnight success, which some people can't handle. What I went through forges character. I'm not the same person I was when I went to New York seven years ago."

Miller has been fighting the odds for most of his 35 years.

His interest in theater started in his native Scranton, Pa., when a nun encouraged him to enter a poetry reading.

He joined the drama club at the University of Scranton and won the annual play contest with a one-acter called "The Winner."

He did graduate work at Catholic University in Washington, D.C., where he met his wife, Linda, an aspiring actress. They were confident enough in their future to move to New York.

"It was rough," Miller recalled. "I believe there are 16,000 actors in New York, and 450 of them made a living from their profession last year. It's the largest part-time employment category in the city."

Miller worked as waiter, social worker and teacher between acting jobs. In 1970 he mentioned a play he was writing to producer Joseph Papp and director A.J. Antoon, for whom he was appearing in an off-Broadway production. It was "That Championship Season," which drew from Miller's life as a high school basketball player in a Pennsylvania town.

The hit play led to Miller's being cast as Jesuit Father Karras in "The Exorcist."

"Billy Friedkin, who was directing the picture, came to 'That Championship Season' and noted the references to the Jesuits," said the playwright. "He called my agent and said that he had an intuitive feeling that I might be the one to play Father Karras."

"I hadn't read the book, but being an Irish Catholic, I had been brought up on the mythology of exorcism. I read the script and liked it, and I asked Friedkin, 'What do I have to do?' He said I had to come to Hollywood and make a screen test." Scranton University, Miller's alma mater, is run by the Jesuits.

Miller, a strongly built man with a darkly handsome face, won the test and worked six months on the trouble-plagued film.

Low-numbered license plates will be eliminated

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — Unless a judge says otherwise, those low-numbered license plates will be only collector items after this year.

Gov. Christopher S. Bond is trying to eliminate the plates, which some motorists and politicians think are prestigious. He said they are a carryover of the system of political favoritism he campaigned against last year.

Most of the plates, numbered from 1 to 9,999 are held by Democrats.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dyke of Montgomery City, who have held number 1-248 since 1948, filed a class action suit Oct. 11 in Cole County Circuit Court. They want a court order to force Revenue Director James R. Spradling to give them the same plate next year. They cite a section of state law they say provides for permanent retention of license numbers for non-commercial vehicles.

Leland Curtis, legal counsel for the Department of Revenue, said Tuesday "until we get a court decision, we're going to proceed as planned — to phase them out."

Memorial service scheduled

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A memorial service will be held in St. Louis Sunday for the Rev. Dr. Louis W. Goebel, who served as president of the former Evangelical and Reformed Church for 15 years.

Dr. Goebel, who retired in 1953, died Monday night at Deaconess Hospital, where he had been a patient since suffering a stroke three weeks earlier. He was 89.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Moss, president of the United Church of Christ, will deliver the sermon at the memorial service, to be held Sunday afternoon at the St. Lucas United Church of Christ. A private service for members of the family was scheduled Thursday at the Frieden United Church of Christ in St. Charles.

Dr. Goebel was elected president of the church in 1938, when it was formed by a union of the Reformed Churches in North America and the Evangelical Synod of North America. The Evangelical church has since become a part of the United Church of Christ.

Dr. Goebel was preceded in death by his wife. Survivors included a son and two daughters.

Cite reasons why students quit school

By JACK SCHICHT
Democrat-Capital Staff Writer

About four out of every 100 high school students in the Pettis County area dropped out of school last year, according to a Democrat-Capital survey.

This is in sharp contrast to a recent report from Kansas City which said that about 16 per cent of the students attending public high schools there became dropouts last year.

In general, the figures show that the larger the school, the higher the dropout rate. And although the dropout rate in some schools has risen over the last five years, the rate of increase has not alarmed school officials.

Administrators at nine high schools were interviewed: Smith-Cotton, Sacred Heart, Northwest (Hughesville), LaMonte, Smithton, Green Ridge, Clinton, Sweet Springs and Ottaville.

The highest dropout percentage last year was noted by Clinton, where 5.5 per cent of the students in grades 10 through 12 — or 26 students out of an enrollment of 468 — were listed as dropouts.

Smith-Cotton's dropout rate for the 1972-73 school year was the next highest at 5.3 per cent. A total of 89 students — 64 boys and 25 girls — quit school.

Northwest noted a dropout rate of 4 per cent last year (five students), while the rest of the schools listed dropout rates of less than two per cent.

The actual number of dropouts at any one school varies from year to year. At Sweet Springs, for instance, Superintendent Robert Longwith said last year the school's dropout rate was 1.5 per cent while during the 1971-72 school year it was 4.8 per cent. Similarly, he noted, the rate dipped to 2.6 per cent in 1970-71 from a high of 5.4 per cent in 1969-70.

Reasons given

School officials listed five chief reasons why students quit school: academic difficulty, behavior problems, pregnancy or marriage, employment and a general dislike for school.

"The students who do drop out," said Ordell Sholl, superintendent at LaMonte, "are basically those who can't cut it socially or academically."

Another problem, said Jack Chambers, principal at Green Ridge, has to do with the student's interest in his high school curriculum. "A job is simply more interesting to many of them," he said.

Gerald Jenkins, junior and senior high school principal at Smithton, said his experience has shown that most students quit to go to work. "The almighty dollar is more important to them than anything else. They've got to get a job to buy gasoline for their cars. They all have to get cars as soon as they turn 16."

Echoing Jenkins' comments was Paul F. McKee, superintendent at Northwest. "They've got to have that automobile when they become 16 and they have to have money to make the payments."

McKee said that still others drop out because they find themselves working less in school and becoming increasingly frustrated. "It starts in the seventh, eighth or ninth grade. You can see them falling into the pattern," he said.

Jim Roy, guidance counselor at Clinton, blamed the lack of vocational education, in part, for the dropout rate. "A lot of students don't like an academic program. They just don't like school."

Roy noted that some students who had dropped out of school last year have returned this year specifically for vocational or technical training. "It's like night and day — their difference in attitudes," he said.

buying a high school education as being a solution to their problems," he said.

Smith-Cotton principal Earl Finley said one might see a relationship between overcrowding in the schools and the dropout rate. Last year, when overcrowding at the high school was relieved by the opening of the new junior high school, the number of dropouts was lower than the three previous years, when an average of about 350 more students jammed the halls and classrooms at the high school.

In explaining the great difference between the local dropout rate and the rate in Kansas City schools, school officials cited two contributing factors: the better availability of jobs in the metropolitan area and the lack of a teacher, student, parent and administrator relationship.

"Around here (Sweet Springs) there's much more family life and the parents will pressure their children to stay in school," Longwith said. "And with the relationship in a small town between the parents, teachers and administrators, a student has got three people to go through before he can quit school."

School officials also cited sociological reasons for the difference: Lehman, who taught at Central High School in Kansas City (where the dropout rate is 26.3 per cent), blamed the high dropout rate at the school on the inner-city environment of the school's students. "It's in our society," he said.

None of the administrators interviewed predicted that the dropout rate in the Pettis County area would substantially increase or show a great drop in the next few years. Many said that with the declining birth rate and more vocational-technical programs, the rate might actually show a slight decrease.

But there always will be dropouts. "Just as college isn't for everyone," said Longwith, "high school isn't either."

Finley said that the dropout figures at Smith-Cotton (and at many of the other schools) do not take into consideration the student returning to school.

"Not all drops are permanent drop-outs," Finley said. Some return the next year, some go to school somewhere else and don't report to us. Others go for the GED diploma."

The following dropout rates at each school were made available:

Sacred Heart: An average of 1 or 2 dropouts per year; last year no dropouts were recorded.

Ottaville: Five dropouts in the last five years, out of an average student body of 90 for grades nine through 12, according to Larry Hagedorn, superintendent.

Sweet Springs: a rate of from 1.5 per cent to 5.4 per cent the past four years.

Clinton: A rate of 3.7 per cent in 1966-67; 2.2 per cent in 1967-68; 4.1 per cent in 1968-69; 4 per cent in 1969-70; 5.4 per cent in 1970-71; 5.3 per cent in 1971-72; 5.5 per cent in 1972-73. The dropout figures varied from nine students out of an enrollment of 409 in 1967-68 to 26 dropouts last year in a student body of 468 (for grades 10 through 12).

Northwest: 4 per cent last year, or 5 students out of an enrollment of 125. "About the same as previous years," McKee said.

Smithton: 3.5 per cent (seven students) in 1971-72; 1.5 per cent last year (three students); 3 per cent so far this year (six students). Average enrollment is about 200.

Green Ridge: About six persons dropped out the past five years.

LaMonte: Six dropouts in the last four years; two last year, none the year before and one in 1970-71.

Dropouts usually have low standing

Information compiled by administrators and guidance counselors at Smith-Cotton High School shows that the majority of students who dropped out of the school ranked in the lower fourth of their class.

Last year, for instance, 63 of the 89 dropouts ranked below the 25th percentile. Only 11 of the 409 total Smith-Cotton dropouts the last four years ranked in the top quarter of their class. About 40 per cent of the dropouts ranked between the 25th and 75th percentiles the past four years.

Statistics also show that more boys than girls drop out of high school. Last year, for instance, 64 boys and 25 girls accounted for the 5.3 per cent dropout rate in grades 9 through 12 at Smith-Cotton.

Dropout rates the previous five years, based on total enrollment in grades eight through 12, are as follows:

In 1971-72, 4.5 per cent, 46 boys and 47 girls; 5.7 per cent in 1970-71, 65 boys and 51 girls; 5.3 per cent in 1969-70, 75 boys, 36 girls; 4.2 per cent in 1968-69, 52 boys and 37 girls; and 3.6 per cent in 1967-68, 48 boys and 23 girls.

"Dislike of school experience" was listed as the major reason for dropouts, according to the information. Twenty-nine of the dropouts last year fell under this category.

The next major reason given most often for quitting school was employment, followed by behavioral difficulty, marriage, academic difficulty and pregnancy, in that order. Approximately 12 per cent of the dropouts listed other reasons.

Smith-Cotton principal Earl Finley said the reasons given administrators by the dropouts are of "doubtful validity." He added, "Some of the reasons given are not the true reasons, and the person compiling the report may categorize reasons differently."

Q — Recently at the intersection of 16th and Washington, we were stopped for a stop sign when we were hit from behind by a police car. The police officer, who was in uniform, got out and said no report would have to be made since no damage was done. Is this right? Shouldn't a report have been made by the officer, since we were stopped when the accident occurred? He claimed a malfunction on the police car, but other people have to have reports made when something like this happens. What's the difference? — Mrs. H. R.

A — City Counselor Robert Fritz explained that city statutes do not require accidents to be reported to city police. This action, he said, can be taken on the initiative of the persons involved for insurance purposes, but it is not compulsory.

In such cases where police are not called, Fritz advised the parties to obtain each other's name and address in the event later contact must be made. Fritz said the fact that the vehicle which struck you was a police car makes no difference in the procedure.

Q — My blind father's dog (strictly a companion) was hit by a car and died. The driver of the car did not stop. Did he violate a city ordinance by not stopping after hitting the dog? — C. H.

A — City Prosecutor Robert Liston explained that the city statute concerning "leaving the scene of an accident" does not apply in instances involving animals. However, Liston said, if you copied down the car's license plates, or in some other manner could positively identify the driver who struck the dog, it may be possible to collect damages in a civil suit.

Bill Lehman, principal at Sacred Heart, attributed part of the dropout rate to a disillusionment about higher education. "A lot of kids aren't

4-H Council president is elected

Jim McMullin, Route 1, LaMonte, is the newly elected president of the Pettis County 4-H Council for 1974.

McMullin is a nine-year 4-H member and has been active in junior and teen leader work.

Other officers named at a recent meeting were Carla Jackson, Sedalia, vice-president; Carolyn Dotson, LaMonte, secretary; Mrs. John Knaus, Sedalia, treasurer; Sandy Shepp, Green Ridge, reporter; and Mrs. Cleo Hampp, Florence, parliamentarian.

All new officers were formally installed during ceremonies at the Pettis County Courthouse Assembly Room.

In other 4-H news, it was reported that three Pettis County 4-H'ers attended the American Royal 4-H Conference in Kansas City Sunday and Monday. They were McMullin, Charles Fortune, Route 5; and Karen Kinsey, Route 5. They were among more than 300 delegates from Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska.

In related news, it was learned Pettis County Junior leaders are hosting a Show-Me Area junior leader part at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the Sacred Heart High School student center. Junior leaders from Pettis, Johnson, Lafayette and Henry Counties are invited.

Divers will meet in Sedalia

Underwater photography, ecology dives and special skills events will be featured at the 14th annual fall convention of the Midwest Diving Council Friday through Sunday at the Ramada Inn.

In addition to the various competitive events, the three-day affair will also be highlighted by a banquet and program Saturday night. Following the meal, special awards will be presented and all entries in the underwater photography will be viewed, with the winning entries to be announced at that time.

A special guest at the convention will be Paul Humann, Grand Cayman, British West Indies, who will present a special photographic display. Humann has held offices in the Midwest Diving Council and the Underwater Society of America. His articles and photographs have been published regularly in "Skin Diver" and "Diving World" magazines.

The Midwest Diving Council, Inc., has a membership of about 400 scuba divers and covers an area including Missouri, southern Iowa, western Illinois, northern Arkansas, northeastern Oklahoma and Kansas.

Also at the convention, the governing body of the Council, composed of representatives from each member club, will elect officers for the coming year and implement changes in bylaws and its constitution, if necessary.

Price of food on America's tables will never again be the same

By JOHN BARBOUR
AP Newsfeatures Writer

The American farmer is grinning over record crops and record profits. The American housewife is groaning under the burden of high food prices.

In the last year the nation has endured both gross and subtle changes in the way it reaps and sells its harvest. The price of basic foods that reach the American table will never be the same.

Gone forever, say the farmers, are the days of 29-cents-a-pound chicken, 55-cents-a-dozen eggs and 69-cents-a-pound hamburger.

Gone with steadily rising demand for U.S. feed and food grains abroad.

Gone with farm subsidies that some experts contend really subsidized the consumer, not the farmer.

Gone with the devaluation of the dollar which makes U.S. farm products cheaper and, in some cases, a bargain for other countries.

In the ebb and flow of supply and demand, it is a seller's market. And the farmer is determined to keep it that way.

"We've had three years that we've been in a depression and we've lost money," a Georgia egg producer says. "I've lost a half-million dollars in the last three years. People out there can't seem to realize that they've been buying eggs for less than production costs." He's making money now.

A large chicken producer, his product flowing across the nation, says: "We lost $9 million two years ago. But we made it back this year."

Overlaying this year's market have been government policies that both farmer and housewife have found unequal, and/or ineffective.

Poultry farmers cut flocks and cattlemen kept their herds from market.

In 1971 the United States had the largest laying flock in its history, over 307 million hens. But by August 1973, the flock had been cut to about 281 million birds, simply by not replacing hens taken out of production. It was the smallest flock since 1961.

Flocks were cut by 20 million birds in the first seven months of this year, and that means an annual deficit of over 4½ billion eggs.

Normally the nation slaughters 600,000 head of beef a week. During the price freeze the number fell to 500,000.

That meant there was a stockpile of beef on the hoof back in the hills and prairies.

"When the range dries up this fall, they've gotta come to town," says one feeder who pays to fatten cattle for market. "Most fellows who run a cow herd aren't equipped to keep them after calf weight."

Sure enough, when the price freeze ended, chicken and egg producers began rebuilding their flocks; beef poured to the market. Prices went down, at least somewhat. But only temporarily.

Most experts say that as the market evens out, as short-term oversupply clears up, prices will go back up again.

Higher prices. Inevitably. Calves in the feed lots now will come out of the packing houses costing at least 90 cents a pound, bone and all.

The current glut of beef stampeding to market has to force the price of other meat animals — hogs, calves and chicken — down as well, but only temporarily.

Basic beef

The calves are part of an occasional gamble for Kansas farmer Ralph Gross. He buys them to fatten for market, in addition to raising wheat and corn. The factors in the gamble are the price he pays for the calves, the cost of their food, and the price he gets when he sells them for slaughter. This year there's been no sense in the business, say livestock men. "We haven't had the least idea of what's been going on the last eight months," says Ralph Gross.

The high cost of feed grains must send the price up again.

Farmers are more sophisticated today, and the ones who survived the last decade are bigger. Smaller, less efficient farms have been forced out of business. And today's farmer is a keen student of the market.

Underneath it all there are some sharp economic facts of life, all of them tied to the higher costs of grain. Consider:

A baby chick costs almost nine cents to hatch. It eats 70 cents worth of feed in nine weeks and dresses out to a broiler weighing 2½ pounds on the supermarket shelf. Total cost: $1.09. But the price tag at 79 cents a pound is $1.98. At that price the farmer makes a healthy profit.

It costs $1.95 to raise a laying hen which will produce 230 eggs in 12 months of sitting. Pro-rated, it costs almost 60 cents to produce a dozen top-quality eggs. The supermarket price tag is more than $1 a dozen. The farmer makes a healthy profit.

It might cost about $70 to raise an acre of wheat. At $4 a bushel, assuming a 60-bushel yield per acre, a farmer would gross $240 an acre. The bigger the farm, the healthier the profit.

At the Southern Empire Egg Farm, Lithia Springs, Ga., a few miles from Atlanta, Paul J. Davis and his two sons oversee the production of more than 500,000 hens.

He is getting good prices now, in spite of high feed costs. Corn, which makes up almost two-thirds of the hens' diet, has doubled in price in a year. Soybeans, which make up most of the protein supplement in the chicken feed, is four to five times more expensive than a year ago.

It takes 25 weeks to raise a pullet to egg production, or about 10 cents of the cost of a dozen eggs. It used to run only eight cents.

His other costs break down to five cents a dozen for the cost of maintaining and gathering the hens, a half-cent to transport them from the independent growers to Davis' laying houses, a penny for loss to disease, another eight cents for labor, cartons, cases and refrigeration.

The overhead, minus feed, comes to about 24 cents. It takes at least four pounds of feed to produce a dozen eggs. That costs 36 cents.

Davis runs a six-day-a-week operation. It is largely automated, with the hens in nests or wire coops, the feed replenished by conveyor, the eggs removed by conveyor. Even the handling and packing is done by machine, a machine that costs $100,000.

All around him chicken and egg producers have gone out of business, caught in the cost-price squeeze. Davis hires some of them to grow his hens to production age. These subcontractors will make from $300 to $1,000 a week.

A U.S. Department of Agriculture study shows that the number of egg-producers declined by 50 per cent or better in five years ending in 1969, and the trend continues.

Now with 38 of his 52 chicken houses empty, Davis is happily making money again.

But he dreads having to borrow money again. "I just couldn't stand the 10 to 12 per cent (interest) money out here now."

So Davis goes on, producing eggs while the sun shines, importing 400 to 500 tons of grain and corn a week, dealing with the federal safety experts, the Food and Drug Administration and the Department of Agriculture.

Meanwhile he turns over his flock every 12 months, sells his broken eggs for dog food, and his worn out hens for canned chicken products like soup, which by the way adds to his income handsomely. He used to get only four to six cents a pound for hens whose laying days were over. Now he gets 18 to 20 cents a pound, which has to do something to the price of chicken soup.

Because of the demand his eggs move out smartly, all 115 million of them a year.

The high prices for eggs are affecting consumption. In 1960 Americans consumed 334 eggs per person each year. This year it will probably fall below 300.

Consumer resistance has shown itself strongly in a number of farm produce areas. But people have to eat something and if they rebel at high beef prices, they generally turn to a substitute like chicken.

The broiler chicken is the cheapest, most efficient way to make a pound of meat.

The fertilized eggs are collected daily, and before they are five days old are placed in mechanized incubators at 100 degrees Fahrenheit and 80 per cent humidity.

After 18 days in the incubator and three days in a hatcher, about 85 percent of the eggs hatch.

The chicken producer supplies the chicks and the feed and pays the grower about 2.2 cents per pound gained. A grower with two chicken houses, caring for 25,000 chickens, can make as much as $2,250 for nine weeks' work.

Ralph Gross is a Kansas farmer who raises wheat and corn and takes an occasional gamble on fattening beef for market. In short, he buys the calves when they come to the feed lot, and pays their feed bill, then sells them for slaughter.

Consider these figures from Gross' gamble in 1972, and his gamble today. In 1972, 203 calves cost him just under $61,000. In 1973, 201 head cost him over $66,000. In 1972, the feed lot bill came to about $19,000. In 1973, his feed bill ran almost $23,000.

His increase in costs from 1972 to 1973 for almost the same number of cattle ran something over $9,000, not counting interest on the money, which was running about 8 per cent in 1972, and nearly 10 per cent now.

His break-even cost was 48 cents a pound on the hoof, and that was the market price at the freeze ended and more cattle began moving to market. Experts in the livestock end of things decry government controls.

"We haven't had the least idea of what's been going on the last eight months," Gross says. And Don Fender of the Farmland Industries packing plant in Garden City, Kan., agrees. "It's been a very trying year. If I took the end of March until now, I'd say we've faced more uncertainties than I've seen in 20 years in the business."

There were other influences tending to push prices up. The government ordered farmers to stop feeding calves diethylstilbesterol, or DES, a hormone which helped them fatten sooner. So at the same time that feed grain prices were rising, farmers found that they had to add another month of feeding time to get cattle to slaughter weight.

Television commercial stars eat up their profits

By SUSAN MERRILL
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Leonard Brook speaks goat, sheep, dog and cat. He could teach Dr. Do-little a thing or two. Talking to animals is his business.

He heads Dawn Animal Agency, Inc., a company that owns, trains and handles animals in show business.

He's discovered such talents as Patrick, the shaggy sheep dog of Alpo dog food fame; Desert Queen, the white horse you can take anywhere compliments of White Horse Scotch; the brown rat of the "starve-a-rat" campaign in New York City; and the owl that Liza Minnelli talked to in the movie "Tell Me You Love Me Junie Moon."

He's booked chickens in the opera, goats on Broadway, skunks and camels in television commercials, cheetahs and bears in print ads and dogs and cats for pet food commercials.

Fourteen years ago, Brook, his wife, Bunny, and her sister Barbara Austin put their animal communication skills to work. They were doing animal rescue work — finding homes for strays but finding instead that they were keeping most of the lost animals.

Their menagerie grew but not their funds. Rather than give up the animals, they discovered a way for the creatures to pay for themselves.

Today, with a 40-acre farm in New Jersey and a New York City office manned by Barbara Austin, Dawn is the largest animal rental agency on the East Coast.

They do as many as 800 television commercials, nine feature films, a dozen operas, 400 print ads a year and numerous promotions and Broadway shows.

The average dog or cat gets $150-$175 for a day's work doing one commercial. That's about what the average person gets. But animals, unlike people, get no residuals.

Larger animals like Frith, a baby elephant, get from $250 to $350. A job requiring 30 dogs

Valuable property

Shooting a television commercial in a New York studio, the model is out on her own, while the buffalo has animal renter Leonard Brooks, right, and his wife Bunny, with broom, in attendance. Brooks heads Dawn Animal Agency, Inc., an enterprise which started 14 years ago when he, his wife and her sister, then doing animal rescue work, found they'd accumulated a considerable menagerie and few funds. Rather than give up the animals they devised a way for the animals to earn their keep. (AP) can bring in as much as $1,500 for a commercial.

Together, Dawn's more than 500 animals earn a gross yearly income of nearly $100,000. But their net income is a different story. The animals literally eat up all the profits.

"We make more and more money each year in gross. Our net is always the same — about zero. But I'm not complaining. Animals are our way of life, and we love it. . . . This is a way of having as many as we want," says Brook. He was standing in the backyard of his farm. A llama was nibbling his coat tails, a baby elephant frisking him for pencils and a dromedary drooling on his head.

Bunny Brook will admit to spending about $100,000 during their animal career to get animals they couldn't resist or ones in demand by clients. But most of their animals come to them free of charge. They're rejects. The lion — cute and conversational when a cub — becomes undesirable when it matures and sees some family's three-year-old as a meal instead of a playmate.

Many of Dawn's animals have been mutilated — de-clawed or defanged — or are too tame to survive with their own kind even in a zoo. Others, like some of the horses and the six llamas, were bought by the pound at the going price for meat on the hoof at horse auctions if you beat out the glue factories, riding schools and dog food companies.

To get animals to do what a script calls for amid hot lights, yelling directors and nervous people, Dawn handlers croon animal sounds, whisper commands, tap on shiny objects and give their actors constant rewards.

Dawn's basic training method is to encourage animals' natural talents and rehearse them thoroughly.

"If a dog likes to carry things around, we teach him to retrieve. A jumping cat we train to jump up on something, and we give him a reward."

"I did a job of a cat swimming once for Purina, but I prepared the cat first," said Len, who began testing each of his 80 cats in a bathtub of water until he found one that took to it naturally.

"We did a commercial a couple of years ago for Dow Chemical showing a can of spray, and a skunk is supposed to come out and smell it and run away. Now our skunk is not trained, so we tricked the skunk," Brook said. "We did it with smells and odors and what-not in order to get him over there and then a quick move made him react quickly in the other direction and put his tail up as if he was defensive and so the commercial came out great. . . ."

Dawn doesn't believe in cruelty to get great action shots.

"To starve a dog or cat so it will eat the client's product would be stupid," Brook said. "You don't have to. You just give them their next meal on set."

Dawn turns down some scripts. They wouldn't let their lioness take the role of the lion in the movie "The Gang That Couldn't Shoot Straight" because, among other indignities, she would have had to go through a car wash.

Retired or nervous animals are never made to work. And at least a fifth of Dawn's animals are quietly munching the rest of their lives away without threat of their pension running out.

Everyday crises are the most pressing at the animal farm. Dawn pays its vet $10,000 annually. And they still have problems.

George, their dromedary, once had an upset stomach. In humans this is a minor affliction; in dromedaries it can be fatal.

"We tried to call someone who knew something about camels and couldn't find anyone," Brook said. "So we

Socializing

Public attention is nothing new for the llama being coyly embraced at a Long Island children's fair. The llama belongs to Dawn Animal Agency, Inc., a large animal rental company whose talent pool is tapped for opera, Broadway, TV commercials, print ads and pet food commercials. The fair gives children a chance to get close to animals — and animals a chance to get used to strangers. The animals normally live on a 40-acre farm in New Jersey. (AP) mixed up a soapy solution of every human concoction we could find — Pepto Bismol, Alka Seltzer — and we pumped it down into his stomach. And he got over it.

"He burped a lot for a while but he felt much better."

Bus line asks fare reduction

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The Bi-State Transit System asked the interstate Commerce Commission Tuesday for permission to reduce the basic bus fare from 45 cents to 25 cents effective Nov. 12.

ICC approval is necessary before the fare can be changed because the bus system operates in both the Missouri and Illinois areas of metropolitan St. Louis.

A spokesman said the request is being processed under emergency procedures so that the Nov. 12 deadline for implementation of the reduction can be met. Normally, a fare change cannot take effect until 30 days after the request has been filed with the ICC.

In addition to the reduction of the basic fare, the Bi-State Board of Commissioners also ordered last week a reduction in the fare for senior citizens to 15 cents during off-peak hours.

Off-Broadway knows no bounds

By HUGH HECKMAN
Associated Press Writer
NEW YORK (AP) — "Off-off-Broadway is love." "Off-off-Broadway is something wonderfully vulgar in the best American sense." "Off-off-Broadway is that vast kind of theater open to any form — without financial worries." These are just three representative definitions of that amorphous and sometimes mysterious domain known as Off-off-Broadway. There are no physical boundaries to Off-off-Broadway, and many would argue that neither are there boundaries of form or approach.

O.O.B. is, first of all, theater — wherever and however playwrights, actors, directors, enough capital and all the other ingredients of a "production" can be gathered under one roof, or even in some waterproofed basement. The Off-off-Broadway Alliance currently lists some 47 member theaters, with at least 20 others sprinkled liberally in all areas of New York City. Keeping up with trends, past and present, in OOB can be quite a challenge, since many productions receive little or no publicity and invariably are eclipsed in advertising space by the bigger plums of Off-Broadway and Broadway itself.

Tucked in church lofts and storefronts from the upper Bronx to Washington Square Park, with a side trip across the East River to Brooklyn, and in more elaborate settings sometimes closely resembling theaters, Off-off Broadway finds a home wherever city inspectors and tax assessors permit. But most of the action seems to be found in the East 30's, 40's and 50's and that part of lower Manhattan fondly known as the East Village, through which courses the infamous Bowery.

The bosom of Off-off-Broadway is vitally important to the thousands of actors, directors, set designers and costumers who work for little or no pay because they find other avenues to artistic success cut off by the mere economics of the legitimate theater financial crisis. The 70 or so OOB theaters provide an invaluable proving ground in which to hone already developed (and sometimes, admittedly, not so developed) talent without the pressure of commercial success.

If the phenomenon can be said to have begun, then it began in the coffee houses of Greenwich Village in the late 1950's, where plucky cafe entrepreneurs encouraged the performance of original and short one-act plays. It was against this background that Ellen Stewart came to town and formed the world famous LaMama company in 1960.

A striking black woman who looks to be in her mid-40's, Ellen Stewart now lives in a spacious and airy apartment atop her five-story theater complex on East 4th Street. The complex houses at least 10 (the number changes constantly) companies (including the Playhouse of the Ridiculous, the Asian Theatre Company, the American Indian Theatre Ensemble, the Beauty and the Beast Company and the Theatre of the Eye), dominated, coordinated and guided by the indomitable "Mama" Stewart.

She says she's been called "Mama" for as long as she can remember, but her appearance certainly belies that description. Wearing a stylishly colorful Moroccan print dress, her fingers and wrists bedecked with jewelry, and a conservative Afro hairdo sprayed down the middle with silver coloring, Ellen reigns over an apartment that might itself be confused for a set from a surrealistic play.

Ellen says LaMama is dedicated to the writer and to all phases of the theater. As for Off-off-Broadway, Ellen has no doubt it is a phenomenon in and of itself. "There is no precedent for the OOB movement, no way to place it in historical perspective. It has no predictable future, only a continual growth."

Above all, though, Ellen believes Off-off-Broadway is one of the most "American" forms of theater. "It's a product of the American society itself. America has found its identity in Off-off-Broadway — love, beauty, pornography, nudity, all well-presented." She doesn't feel OOB is in danger of falling prey to commercialism and its accompanying loss of intimacy.

Another prominent theater figure, Andre Gregory, agrees. The unique "Alice in Wonderland" of the tall, handsome artistic director of the Manhattan Project has played to both critical approval and full houses.

Gregory says Off-off-Broadway is slowly moving from tiny hidden-away theaters to larger houses and a more expansive approach, though stopping short of the Broadway level.

Gregory says people in the theater are being forced by a general apathy in theatergoers to create what he calls a "miraculous theatre as fantastic as the world outside, as compelling as Watergate." And like Ellen Stewart, Gregory feels OOB offers a genuinely American experience, "with the same vitality and variety as burlesque." And again agreeing with Miss Stewart, he sees no real trend in Off-off-Broadway but growth itself, in any and all directions.

Another East Village group, the Classical Stage Company Repertory, shies away from a purely experimental approach and concentrates on producing classical and proven plays. But each production is created with a new twist, a new tack designed to focus contemporary attention on its interpretation. The right word might be relevance. The artistic director is Christopher Martin, a young (most of them are) OOB veteran who wears another hat as president of the Off-off-Broadway Alliance.

Martin, an actor by trade who physically resembles what must be the ideal Falstaff, founded the company in 1967, to "reach more people and market a style of classical theater." "We produce every play for a purpose," Martin says. "We take a new approach and interpretation to every play, even Hamlet. We treat it like a new script."

He's quick to admit his theater is based on the spoken word. "Young people are re-finding the word. They're saturated with visual experience, they want something meaningful and rational."

Martin also feels the movement in which he's so deeply involved has a definite present.

"Off-off-Broadway provides a chance to fail and make mistakes — without the pressure of success, which you can't do commercially." As to the future, he thinks "OOB either will become more organized like Off-Broadway. Or it will find its own niche, remaining much like it is today, but with a little more financial stability."

Three out of 70, of course, only scratches the OOB surface. A number of other groups, including those which serve the city's black and Spanish-speaking populations are all healthy and providing necessary theater alternatives.

But the future of Off-off-Broadway is open-ended. Will it follow the pattern of Off-Broadway, like Joseph Papp's Public Theater, and find itself domesticated and compelled to produce plays always with a paying public in mind? Or will it be able to survive as it is, on grants and meager ticket receipts? The clue, perhaps is to be found at LaMama's where many say it all started. "There is no predictable future," says Ellen Stewart. "only continued growth."

Mama of LaMama

Ellen Stewart is the founder of the world famous LaMama company, one of Off-off-Broadway's most successful enterprises. The LaMama theater complex on New York's Lower East Side at present houses at least 10 companies — as well as Miss Stewart's apartment where this picture was made. (AP)

Kidney machine has vital vacation role

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Like many other Americans, Dan Easterling packed up his camper recently, loaded his family aboard and set off for a two-week vacation at the beach.

But for Easterling the vacation wasn't just a holiday — it was a real achievement.

The 34-year-old Ashland, Ky., man has suffered from kidney disease since 1969 and must spend the equivalent of three working days each week hooked to an artificial kidney machine.

He has had three kidney transplants, but his body has rejected them all. So he must undergo a process known as hemodialysis, in which a machine functions as his kidneys to clean his blood.

Last January Easterling became the first patient from the University of Kentucky medical center to use a dialysis unit at home.

Without the home unit, he would have had to travel from his home in the northeast corner of the state to the medical center in Lexington.

"Going to Lexington three times a week and trying to work full-time is impossible," Easterling said. He works in the production planning department at Armco Steel Corp.

This summer Easterling and his wife and son wanted to spend some time at the beach — but travelling and being away from home posed obvious problems.

He discussed his situation with Anna Corea, coordinator of the hemodialysis programs at the UK medical center and the Veterans Administration Hospital in Lexington.

Miss Corea called several medical facilities located near coastal towns to see if Easterling could use an artificial kidney machine. Everything was filled to capacity.

"It took a bit of doing," Miss Corea said, "but after about a week we finally found a home dialysis patient who agreed to let Easterling use his unit."

"Then the two patients got together and worked it out," Easterling took his blood cleaning supplies with him, including pumps and various chemical agents and hooked them up at the home of the donor in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

"We dialyzed three times a week," Easterling said. "He used the machine Monday, Wednesday and Friday, so I adjusted my schedule and used the machine Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday."

"We kept that machine pretty busy."

Easterling said the family camped out on the beach and got up early on the days he was to dialyze.

"You might say we were a little more tied up than the average person on vacation," he said.

Self-sufficiency in energy is new goal

There may be one useful consequence of the war in the Middle East — the attention it has focused on the possibility of an Arab "oil squeeze," and beyond that, on the whole question of energy in an industrialized world.

Thus the United States must take steps now to ensure that it can never be made the victim either of petroleum blackmail or of a dislocation of the world's monetary system by virtue of the immense dollar reserves the oil-exporting countries are accumulating. It must take steps not only for its own security but in the interest of whatever small hopes for peace in the Middle East have not been smashed by this latest war.

The United States will never again be self-sufficient in oil — not as we have become accustomed to using it. Already, John A. Love, White House energy chief, suggests that gasoline rationing may be next in line after government controls on home heating oil, propane and similar fuels. And it has nothing to do with any real or potential Arab oil squeeze.

It's true that there exist significant, untapped reserves of oil and natural gas. According to the U.S. Geological Survey, modern techniques could ultimately find and recover nearly 200 billion barrels of oil and 850 trillion cubic feet of natural gas from seabeds ranging off the U.S. coast from Maine to Alaska.

Yet even should domestic oil production ever again catch up with our continually soaring consumption, the fact remains that oil and gas are simply too valuable as chemical storehouses to be burned. The fact remains that future generations, in this country or elsewhere, will simply not be able to be as prodigal with these resources as we have been.

Rationing, voluntary conservation and accelerated exploitation of reserves are only short-term measures. The ultimate answer lies in the development of new and different sources of energy—nuclear, solar, geothermal, coal gasification, the wind and the tides.

President Nixon recently challenged the scientific community to make the nation entirely self-sufficient in energy — new forms of energy. The challenge is fully as great as that of landing a man on the moon. (NEA)

"WE'VE GOT PLENTY OF FUEL OF ALL KINDS."

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Between 2,000 and 3,500 Americans are burned to death in auto accidents every year. All too many are the victims of poor engineering and government indifference.

We have studied dozens of pictures of scorched cars and blackened corpses. We have also watched vivid color films of auto tests, paid for by the U.S. government but left to gather dust in UCLA's engineering library.

These show what rear-end collisions can do to standard Detroit cars with gas tanks located near the rear, whether they are the late models of Ford, Chrysler, General Motors or American Motors.

In the films, automobiles traveling from 10 to 55 miles an hour are shown slamming into the rear of the test cars. The results are horrifying.

At 30 to 40 miles per hour, the filler tubes were ripped from the tank, which began to rupture. Leaking gas spewed into the car and onto the road. When the fuel was purposely ignited, as often happens from sparks during an accident, the life-like dummies were consumed by fire.

The films also demonstrated that highway cremations can be reduced simply by relocating the gas tank. When the test car was modified to place the tank over the rear axle, the crash failed to split the tank. The only leakage came from the filler tubes.

Other documents, obtained indirectly from Ford's internal files for us by West Los Angeles product safety expert Byron Bloch, show Ford has been crash-testing its gas tanks since 1957. Yet the company, while making some concessions to safety, still refuses to put the tank over the rear axle.

On some Fords, the floor of the truck is the same piece of thin sheet metal as the top of the gas tank — an arrangement criticized by American Motors as early as 1964. But it wasn't until court cases began to accumulate that Ford began abandoning this hazardous design.

Merry-go-round

Lethal gas tank angle is ignored

Meanwhile, General Motors, incredibly, is moving its gas tanks even further back, thus increasing the danger of fiery, rear-end collisions.

Unlike the style-conscious nabobs of Detroit, the National Association for Stock Car Auto Racing has tough rules to block the unnecessary immolation of drivers. To get on a NASCAR track, an auto must have a "firewall of steel not less than 20 gauge thickness," a gas tank "as far forward as possible in the trunk compartment," safety valves and other anti-fire devices.

Ironically, the reason the Detroit automakers give for their interest in racing is to gain more safety research. Yet they refuse to adopt the NASCAR gas system standards. This failure has led to such horror stories as these:

A mother, father and four children from Kentucky were rear-ended as they were driving home from a vacation. The car became a fireball as gas burst out of the ruptured gas tank. A witness tried to pull the screaming family from the car, but the flames forced him back. All six were cremated alive. Our photos of the tragedy show they might have survived if the gas tank had been located over the rear axle.

The car of an 18-year-old New York girl and her parents was hit in the rear at a toll booth. The filler tube popped from the tank, creating a flamethrower effect that incinerated the parents. The burning girl was pulled alive through the front window by a toll booth guard.

Bloch, the Insurance Institute for Highway Safety, and the Center for Auto Safety have all taken their research on fuel systems to the Transportation Department. They have received the legislative support of Rep. John Moss, D-Calif. But so far, the Department has shrugged off the issue except to promise "ultimately" to produce a standard.

In Detroit, spokesman for the Big Three automakers vigorously defended the safety of their cars.

General Motors claimed no matter where a tank is located, fires cannot be completely avoided. "It has not been established," insisted GM, "that moving the tank will significantly improve the crashworthiness of the fuel system."

At Ford, a spokesman said car fires are extremely rare, with the fatality figures more like 600-to-700 than the Transportation Department's 2,000-to-3,500 estimate. The Ford man said there has never been "any demonstrated value to a firewall."

Chrysler claimed there isn't enough data available on the tanks for a final decision. By shifting the tank forward, said the spokesman, the danger might increase from frontal crashes, side accidents and roll-overs.

FOOTNOTE: Despite these protestations, Toyota tests have demonstrated the safety of tanks over the rear axle. In Mercedes-Benz's new sedans, the tank have also been moved over the rear axle. Studebaker Avantis have had firewalls and rear-axle tanks since 1962. Furthermore, the new experimental safety vehicles being developed with federal funds have the tanks over the rear axle, metal firewalls and other safety devices.

Today's thoughts

But let him ask in faith, with no doubting, for he who doubts is like a wave of the sea that is driven and tossed by the wind. For that person must not suppose that a double-minded man, unstable in all his ways, will receive anything from the Lord. — James 1:6, 7.

The individual is but an atom; he is born, he acts, he dies; but principles are eternal. — William Jennings Bryan, American statesman and orator.

And whatever my eyes desired I did not keep from them; I kept my heart from no pleasure, for my heart found pleasure in all my toil, and this was my reward for all my toil. — Ecc. 2:10.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

The first commercially operated electric street railway in the United States was the Baltimore and Hampden Line which was opened by Leo Daft in Baltimore, Md., Aug. 10, 1885. The World Almanac says. The system used a third rail to pick up its power. By 1912, there were about 41,000 miles of electric street railways in the United States.

License to have a baby?

WASHINGTON — Imagine standing on the lawn some moonlit night with your pretty young bride, jointly making the decision that it is time to have a baby. But you can't produce a child until you go down to the new government agency and convince the bureaucrats that you deserve a license for parenthood.

Rowan

You see, government long ago "fixed" either you or the wife (probably the latter) scientifically so that child production is impossible unless and until the government gives you a drug that will reverse the long-term contraceptive that has been imposed upon everyone.

You won't get the reversing drug or a license to have a baby unless you can pass tests that illustrate your intellectual, moral and other qualities for being "a good parent."

No, we haven't reached that state of government control yet. But some psychologists insist that we'll be there in a decade or so, and a few of them are actively campaigning for licensed parenthood.

Roger W. McIntire, a professor of psychology at the University of Maryland, has a long article in the October issue of Psychology Today in which he urges the licensing of parenthood. His justification, he says, is the protection of children.

"Our culture makes almost no demands when it comes to the children's psychological well-being and development," McIntire writes. "Any fool can now raise a child any way he or she pleases, and it's none of our business. The child becomes the unprotected victim of whoever gives birth to him."

McIntire cites as a sort of precedent the practice of adoption agencies in screening potential parents. "It seems that our society cares more about the selection of a child's second set of parents than it does about his original parents," he argues.

What produces this Orwellian proposal which will surely strike millions of people as police-state madness in the name of child protection? It is the march of science plus growing assumptions by the social scientists that they now know enough to determine who can be a good parent and who cannot.

McIntire notes that "we will soon have the (contraceptive) technology necessary to carry out a parenthood licensing program, and history tells that whenever we develop a technology, we inevitably use it."

So, insisting that child-bearing is not a divine right, McIntire advocates a system where everyone is rendered temporarily sterile until they can take exams and prove that they know enough about such things as "sound nutrition and diet," "principles of behavioral development," "principles of learning and language acquisition," and a lot more exotic gobbledygook like "principles of modeling and limitation — how children learn from and copy their parents' behavior," or "principles of reinforcement — how parent and peer reactions reward a child's behavior, and which rewards should be used."

It must already be clear that only psychologists who deal in that kind of mumbo-jumbo would be qualified to make the decision as to who deserves a license to have a baby.

McIntire does not deal with the catastrophic criminal effect of such a licensing program. Imagine the black market for the "unlock" drug that would reverse the sterilization of young couples. The heroin traffic would pale into nothingness. Imagine the new temptations to bribery that the parenthood licensing bureaucrats would face. Think of the potential for class discrimination, or racial genocide.

The wretched rearing, the neglect, the physical abuse of children is a serious problem. But surely we can devise solutions short of McIntire's monstrous scheme for giving "Big Brother" the key to everybody's chastity belt.

One of the principal matters discussed at the Chamber of Commerce board meeting . . . today was relative to the effort being made to interest the Brown Shoe Company in locating in Sedalia.

95 years ago

East Sedalia is rapidly growing in the number of improvements and in business importance. New dwellings are constantly going up, and the population is steadily increasing. In view of these facts we want to make a suggestion for our city dads to act upon. Put up another telephone connecting the official building on Osage street with the East Sedalia Engine house.

Food shortages compounded by wastage

By BRUCE BLOSSAT
NEA News Analyst

WASHINGTON — When you're down at the supermarket gazing at the staggering figures on the food price scoreboard, remember that the world supply situation today plays a big part. And give a moment's thought, as you roll your cart of golden goodies, to the awful wastage of good crops around the world.

Blossat

The U.N.'s Food and Agriculture Organization says in a report that, not surprisingly, the tragedy is greatest among 70 developing tropical and subtropical nations with a population upwards of two billion total — and growing apace.

The report estimates that annually, through large areas of the globe, storage and related losses amounting to about 30 per cent of harvested crops.

Think of it! Imagine the expense and the labor and the time that go into preparing land, seeding it, cultivating and irrigating it where necessary, and, finally, harvesting the crop.

Then, picture the carts and wagons and trucks trundling away from the harvested fields, and think of the horror in the fact that nearly a third of the product that rolls away will never reach a hungry or needy consumer's hand. In an age of shortages, hunger, outright famine, outrageous prices for food and fiber, it is incredible.

And, again, remember, that it is happening mostly in the poor countries where the need for uplift is greatest.

In an early September report, I spoke of man's endless and ruthless assault upon the land through ages of overgrazing, overcropping, and misuse of water (including priceless irrigation water.) The aim in part: To show that ecological recklessness, a big cry today leveled too often just at large, highly visible offenders, is as old as history.

But the harvest wastage is surely as bad. What happens?

Large volumes of grain and other crops are destroyed at various post-harvest stages by rodents and insects. Even the affluent lands in temperate zones are not spared. In this country, grain storage losses are figures at 15 to 23 million tons a year, some 7 million to rats, the rest to insects.

In some Latin and Asian lands, storage and related losses come each year to 50 per cent of a harvested crop. World-wide, FAO estimates an annual loss of 10 per cent of all stored grain.

Bad handling, drying and transportation practices account for assorted kinds of spoilage which usually ruins crops for consumption. Deterioration can produce weight loss, but also damaging chemical changes.

It's cruel to hear, knowing the disease peril, but the FAO says that "in many countries the presence of insects and other contaminants in stored food has become an accepted phenomenon."

Ignorance, indifference, and sometimes malpractice are the root causes of this terrible waste, and these handicaps may be exhibited by the farmer himself, the field handlers, the large organizations which store and transport harvested crops both overland and by water.

Some losses obviously are inescapable, since men can't wholly control the animal-and-insect world. But, unmistakably, the mark of human failure is upon this enormous enterprise of saving what man grows until he can use it fruitfully.

Three Buffs questionable

Gibson says OU is the best

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Maybe Coach Vince Gibson has determined that his Kansas State football team responds to some kind of reverse psychology.

He's been praising third-ranked Oklahoma, which visits Manhattan Saturday, to the heavens. One would need mountains of Purple Pride not to be scared pink by the things he's been saying.

"Oklahoma is probably the best team in the country... That wishbone really gives you problems... Oklahoma uses it so well, it's a whole new world trying to get ready for it in just a week... Defensively, they really attack you... They are by far the most physical team we've played."

The Wildcats' Greg Jones will be out after straining knee ligaments last week against Iowa State and will be replaced at linebacker by a freshman, Theopolis Bryant.

Earlier in the week Oklahoma Coach Barry Sitzer indicated the Sooners aren't taking K-State lightly. Tuesday the Sooners worked against K-State's offensive and defensive alignments.

Switzer said "I'm worried about our mental preparation."

The Oklahoma State coaches are hoping that with a recovered Brent Blackman at quarterback, a victory is much more conceivable over Nebraska. They'll be playing at Stillwater before representatives of the Liberty, Sun, Cotton and Sugar bowls.

Nebraska Coach Tom Osborne reports he's starting to get flack for poor play-calling. Then there's talk about lack of scoring punch. But he feels his Cornhuskers had no picnic facing the likes of Missouri—a one-point loss—and Kansas—a one-point victory. Therefore, says Osborne, there will be no cracking down on the football team... not this week, anyway.

Iowa State, logically, is stressing pass defense and pass rush this week. The Cyclones are preparing for pass-happy Kansas and quarterback David Jaynes.

The Jayhawks worked on grass Tuesday in preparation for the Ames trip. They'll apparently be without the services of linebacker Steve Towle, whose knee injury suffered against Nebraska is much worse than earlier diagnosed.

Colorado is doubtful about fullback Bo Matthews and two other players for its game at home against seventh-ranked Missouri. Matthews is the team's leading rusher with 339 yards and an average of six yards per carry. The others are wingback Dave Logan and defensive tackle Jeff Turcotte.

Tiger scout Bob Meyers figures Buffalo runners Charlie Davis and the freshman who took his starting assignment, Bill Waddy, "are probably the two best backs we'll face."

Knicks offense sputters again

NEW YORK (AP) — K.C. Jones, head nurse of the Capital Bullets' traveling hospital ward, was less than confident leading his battered troops into Madison Square Garden against the World Champion New York Knicks Tuesday night.

Not only were the Bullets seriously understaffed due to injuries, but the Knicks were aroused after a horrendous 85-

69 loss to Chicago. New York's poorest offensive performance in 18 years.

"I thought they'd beat us by 50 points," admitted Jones. "They don't usually have two in a row like that."

But New York looked like hell. Capital played like hell and the Bullets ran off with a 101-84 verdict.

"Our guys did some job."

crowed Jones. "It's really something when you win a game under these conditions. It shows you got something to work with."

In other National Basketball Association games, the Cleveland Cavaliers defeated the Portland Trail Blazers, 103-96, the Los Angeles Lakers trimmed the Houston Rockets 107-98 and the Golden State

Warriors whipped the Phoenix Suns 121-109.

In the American Basketball Association the San Antonio Spurs won 112-110 over the San Diego Conquistadors.

Jones, in his first year as Capital Coach, has seen his highly-regarded squad decimated by injuries. Center Wes Unseld is out with an arthritic knee, guard Archie Clark is on the injured list with a shoulder separation and top draft choice Nick Weatherspoon is sidelined with a broken hand.

As a result, the Bullets have won just two of seven games.

Cavaliers 103, Portland 96
Lenny Wilkins scored 30 points and Bobby Smith collected 24 points and 15 rebounds as Cleveland posted its first win and Portland took its first loss.

Lakers 107, Rockets 98... Los Angeles pulled away to a 31-14 lead after one quarter and was never headed. Gail Goodrich led the surge by burning Houston's Calvin Murphy for 17 points in the first period. Goodrich wound up with 29 points and running mate Jerry West added 27.

Warriors 121, Suns 109
Cazzie Russell brought Golden State from behind with 19 points in the last quarter and took game honors with 27 points. Nate Thurmond had a big game for the Warriors with 19 points, 20 rebounds and four blocked shot.

Spurs 112, Q's 110
Joe Hamilton sank a pair of free throws with just three seconds left to give an Antonio its margin of victory and lift the Spurs out of the ABA West Division basement. Rich Jones wound up with 36 points for the winners.

Back with Mets

Yogi Berra signs three-year pact

HAWORTH, N.J. (AP) — Yogi Berra, dressed like Jack Nicklaus but hitting the golf ball very much unlike the pro golfer, reflected for a moment on his new contract to manage the New York Mets.

"They were very good to me," said Berra, who agreed Tuesday to spend his next three summers at Shea Stadium. "I asked if I could have it and they said, fine."

Then Yogi went out for 18 holes of golf. He did better at the negotiation table than he did on the White Beeches Golf and Country Club course. "I am playing lousy golf," the manager confessed.

Berra rounded the course in a snazzy outfit that included two-tone red and white golf shoes. He looked happy, with his contract, if not his golf.

Security was an important part of the new agreement which included a substantial raise, probably to $75,000. More than once, Berra heard the wolves at his door when the Mets were dragging along in last place during what seemed to be an endless summer.

The announcement was made two days after the Mets lost the seventh game of the World Series to the Oakland A's. That was seven games farther than anybody, Berra included, expected them to go this season.

Yogi admitted there was a point during the season when the World Series was the last thing on his mind.

"I didn't think we had a chance in July and August," said Berra. "I'll admit that."

Berra had company then, with the Mets playing simply bad. That was when talk about firing the manager was loudest. Then, when some of his injured players returned, the team started to mesh and Berra's job no longer became in jeopardy.

"I could have signed earlier," he said, "but I said, 'let's wait until the season is over.'"

The Mets didn't wait long. The last time Berra managed a team into the Series was in 1964 when the New York Yankees lost to St. Louis. The day after that Series ended, Yogi was fired.

Now the Yankees will share Shea Stadium with Yogi's Mets and rumors persist that their manager will be Dick Williams, who resigned at Oakland after beating Berra in the Series. It is, obviously, a small world.

Jim Jennings leads nation's college runners

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Jim Jennings of Rutgers continues to lead the nation in rushing despite some pushing from Mark Kellar of Northern Illinois.

Kellar rushed for 199 yards last weekend, but still remained No. 2 behind Jennings despite trying harder in the college football foot race.

Jennings' average per game is 12 yards better than Kellar, according to NCAA statistics released today. The Rutgers runner has amassed 783 yards in five games, an average of 156.6 per game.

Kellar, who has rushed for 1,009 yards so far this season, has a per-game-average of 144.1

Gene Swick was the nation's total offense leader with 1,570 yards, an average of 161.7 per game. Villanova's Bill Hatty led the country in passing with 102 completions in 198 attempts for 1,096 yards, an average completion of 17.0 yards.

Henningsen widens lead

Dane Henningsen's 182-yard rushing production in Friday night's 49-6 win over Hannibal has given him a commanding lead in that department in the Central Missouri Conference.

Henningsen, who started his high school career at Richmond, Mo., High School and transferred to Lebanon, Mo., High School last season before coming to Smith-Cotton, ran his season's total to 712 yards on 108 carries, keeping him well ahead of the pace for a 1,000-yard season.

Jefferson City's Delbert Thomas is second in the four-team CMC with 530 yards on 93 carries; teammate David Lynch is third with 464 on 71 tries.

Mike Boggs, who alternates in the Smith-Cotton backfield at all three running back positions, has a slim lead of Hannibal's Rod Knepp for fourth place. Boggs carried only one time against Hannibal Friday, but has 257 yards on 55 attempts for the season. Knepp is right behind in fifth with 243 on 59 carries.

The second five in the top 10 is led by Columbia Hickman's Dave Williams (208 on 43). Hickman quarterback Leo Lewis is sixth with 189 on 39 carries.

Jim Vansell of Smith-Cotton has moved into the league's top 10 for the first time this season. On 31 carries, the junior Tiger has 144 yards.

Jim Marx (Columbia Hickman) is ninth with 131 on 35, while Hannibal quarterback Steve Rampy rounds out the top 10 with 123 yards on 40 attempts.

Five Cowboy grapplers charged with felonies

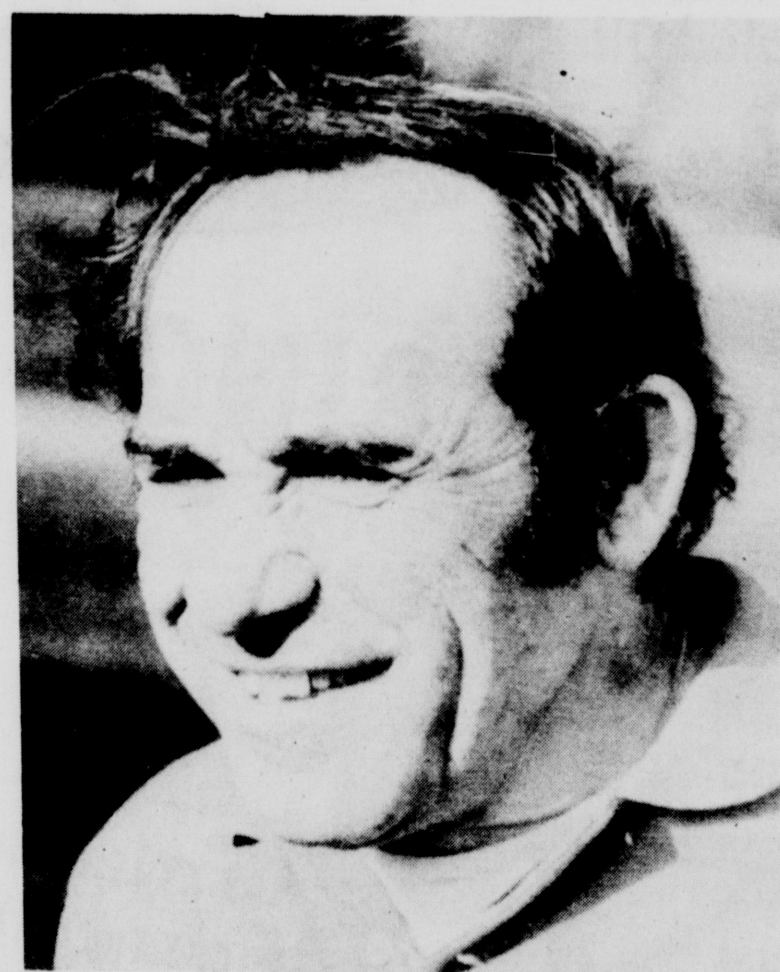

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP)—Five members of the Oklahoma State wrestling squad were charged with felonies Tuesday in connection with thefts on the Stillwater campus and were suspended from the team.

Athletic Director Floyd Gass announced the suspensions Tuesday morning, and said they were effective "indefinitely."

Later, the five wrestlers were arraigned in Payne County District Court on charges ranging from grand larceny, to burglary, to concealing stolen property—all felonies.

Dist. Atty. Charles Headrick said Robert Anderson of Midwest City, Okla., and James O'Connell of Mundelein, Ill., were charged with grand larceny stemming from the theft of a 10-speed bicycle on campus. They were released on their own recognizance and a preliminary hearing was set for them Nov. 6 at 1:30 p.m.

Tennessee State replaces Delaware

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS
Taking advantage of Delaware's first loss in 21 games, Tennessee State moved in to first place today in The Associated Press' small college football poll.

Delaware's 20-game winning streak was stopped by Rutgers 24-7 last weekend, and the Blue Hens dropped to second place behind all-winning Tennessee State.

Tennessee State won its sixth game of the year, battering Florida A&M 45-0 over the weekend and received 27 votes for first place and a point total of 778.

The points gave Tennessee State, last week's second-place team, a comfortable margin over Delaware. The Blue Hens cornered only five first-place ballots this time and finished with 598 points.

Hawaii, fourth last week, moved to No. 3 with two first-place ballots and 567 points. The Rainbows whipped Puget Sound 30-7 for their fifth straight victory.

Cal-Poly, also 5-0, slipped from third to fourth despite beating Fullerton State 21-7. A nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters gave Cal-Poly six first-place ballots and 471 points.

Western Kentucky, 6-0, moved up a notch from sixth to fifth after a 35-0 thrashing of Eastern Kentucky. Western Kentucky, which replaced Grambling as No. 5, collected two first-place votes and 377 points.

The rest of the Top Ten included No. 6 South Dakota, No. 7 Wittenberg, No. 8 Louisiana Tech, No. 9 Grambling and No. 10 North Dakota State.

Wittenberg, Elon and Langston, Okla. were the other teams receiving first-place votes. Each got one apiece.

Perez beats out Mayberry

NL dominates Major League All-Star team

NEW YORK (AP) — Batting champions Pete Rose and Rod Carew, primarily singles hitters, and sluggers Willie Stargell and Reggie Jackson, leaders in home runs and runs batted in, were named today to the 1973 Major League All-Star team announced by The Associated Press.

National Leaguers dominated the voting, winning seven of 10 places on the squad selected by sports writers and broadcasters, but the NL champion New York Mets failed to land a player.

In the balloting based on regular-season performances only, Rose, the National League batting champion for the third time with a .338 average, was the top vote collector.

The hustling Cincinnati Reds' outfielder received 251 votes, 20 more than runner-up Stargell.

Stargell, the husky Pittsburgh Pirates' outfielder-first baseman who led the NL in home runs with 44 and in RBI with 119, accumulated 231 votes.

Jackson, the pacesetter of the American League and World Series champion Oakland A's, won the other outfield berth on the All-Star team with 200 votes. He won the AL home run title with 32 and the RBI championship with 117.

Carew, the Minnesota Twins' slick second baseman, led the infielders with 136 votes. Joining him in the infield were first baseman Tony Perez of the Cincinnati Reds, shortstop Chris Speier of the San Francisco Giants and third baseman Darrell Evans of the Atlanta Braves.

Johnny Bench, Cincinnati's irrepressible catcher, was the only repeater from the 1972 team.

Ron Bryant of the San Francisco Giants, the only National League pitcher with at least 20 victories—he had 24—was chosen as the All-Star left-handed hurler, and fireballing Nolan Ryan of the California Angels, who set a major league strikeout record with 383, was picked as the top right-handed pitcher.

Hank Aaron, Atlanta's 39-year-old slugger who hit 40 homers for a career total of 713, only one short of Babe Ruth's all-time record, wound up fifth among the outfielders with 124 votes. San Francisco's Bobby Bonds was fourth with 157 votes.

The 31-year-old Rose, NL batting champion in 1968 and 1969 with averages of .335 and .348, respectively, won the title this year by rapping out a major league-leading total of 230 hits, including 181 singles.

Carew, also winner of AL batting crowns in 1969 with a .332 mark and 1972 at .318, captured his third title with a .350 average, highest in the majors. He was the only American League player to collect at least 200 hits, finishing with 203, including 156 singles.

He beat out Atlanta's Dave Johnson for the second base spot by 29 votes. Johnson, after setting a major league record for second basemen with 43 homers, received 107 votes.

The closest vote was for right-handed pitcher, Ryan, with a 21-16 record in addition to bettering Sandy Koufax' seasonal strikeout record of 382, polled 105 votes in besting National League strikeout leader Tom Seaver of the Mets.

Seaver garnered 86 votes, highest among the NL champions. Jim Palmer, Baltimore's 22-game winner, finished third with 71 votes, and Jim "Catfish" Hunter, a 21-game winner with Oakland, was fourth with 63.

Bryant received 88 votes in outpolling three other 20-game winners—Vida Blue and Ken Holtzman of Oakland and Wilbur Wood of the Chicago White Sox—to win top honors for left-handed pitchers.

Bench, a 253 hitter with 25 homers and 104 RBI for Cincinnati's NL West Division champions, was a landslide winner as catcher. He got 184 votes, easily outdistancing Thurman Munson of the New York Yankees, runner-up with 57 votes.

Perez, fourth in batting in the National League with a .314 average in addition to hitting 27 homers and driving in 101 runs, received 90 votes for first base.

John Mayberry of the Kansas City Royals finished second with 64 votes.

Evans, a surprising third in the National League with a career high of 41 homers plus a 280 batting average and 104 runs batted in, was tabbed the best third baseman on 119 ballots. Oakland's Sal Bando was next with 87 votes.

The slick-fielding Speier, a 249 batter with 11 homers and 71 runs batted in, collected 103 votes in winning easily at shortstop. Bill Russell of the Los Angeles Dodgers was a distant second with 53.

MU underdog (again)

USC rates slim edge over Irish

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Did John McKay really make a vow in 1966 that Southern California never again would lose to Notre Dame and Ara Parseghian?

"That rumor is not true," says the Southern Cal coach. "I'm not that stupid."

But you never know when McKay is putting you on ... and USC hasn't lost to Notre Dame since a 51-0 shellacking in 1966.

For instance, he said the Trojans played their best game of the year in beating Oregon 31-10 last weekend. Really, John?

"I lie a lot. We didn't play a very good game. We just played fair. Oregon is not a real strong team."

"We haven't played a real good game yet although our offense has started to improve some. Maybe we expected too much of this team."

The big pick ... Southern Cal 24-21.

Last week's count was 49 right, 15 wrong for a .766 percentage.

The upset special just missed when Missouri shaded Oklahoma State 13-9, but the California-Oregon State score was exactly right with the right winner and so was Pitt-Boston College with the wrong winner. The season's score is 290-104-8 for .736.

Northwestern at Ohio State: Wildcats kept it respectable last year. That was last year. Ohio State 45-7.

Virginia Tech at Alabama: Gobblers posted their first victory last week. Good thing, too. Alabama 49-14.

Oklahoma at Kansas State: Oklahoma's Barry Switzer says this is "a very interesting week" in the Big Eight. "You've got Missouri at Colorado and Nebraska at Oklahoma State. That will answer some things about where we stand." Our stand: Oklahoma 38-7.

Michigan at Minnesota: Big Maize Machine captures the Little Brown Jug. Michigan 28-7.

West Virginia at Penn State: Almost heaven ... for Penn State 42-14.

Missouri at Colorado: Luck runs out. Upset special of the week ... Colorado 17-14.

Louisiana State at South Carolina: Only the second time the Tigers have left Baton Rouge this season. Defense bails them out. LSU 24-10.

Nebraska at Oklahoma State: Where oh where have the offenses gone. Both teams have managed just one touchdown in each of their last two starts. Nebraska 28-14.

Houston at Auburn: Lotsa scratching when Cougars' offense meets Tigers' defense. Could go either way, but ... Houston 28-17.

Arizona State at Oregon State: Frank Kush never beat Dee Andros until last year ... and this year. Arizona State 35-6.

California at UCLA: "I guess we're the third worst team in town," says UCLA's Pepper Rodgers, noting that the Los Angeles Rams are 6-0. Southern Cal 5-0-1 and the Bruins only 5-1. Make that 6-1. UCLA 42-21.

Texas Christian at Tennessee: TCU ain't Alabama. Tennessee 34-3.

Watch your step guys

St. Louis Blues' goalie John Davidson (on ice) dives out of the goal to cover up the puck as teammate Wayne Merrick (20) tries to clear out Boston's Phil Esposito battles for the puck between Merrick and Demarco. St. Louis won the game, 3-2, on a late-game goal by Merrick.

(UPI)

Wayne Merrick trips Boston Bruins late

ST. LOUIS (AP) — The St. Louis Blues' Wayne Merrick said he knew all about the Boston Bruins' Phil Esposito, and now maybe the feeling's mutual.

The 21-year-old Merrick held Espo to a near standstill Tuesday night, and the effort paid off in a 3-2 Blues National Hockey League triumph.

As a sidelight, and perhaps only incidental, a nifty Merrick wrist shot snapped a 2-2 tie with 4:16 left for the winning goal.

"I was really scared going into the game," admitted Merrick, who limited Esposito to only five shots.

"He's a pretty good hockey player, probably the best I've ever seen," the young Blues center added. "All I wanted to do was keep him from scoring."

As Merrick was shadowing Esposito, St. Louis shot in front of the Bruins twice only to have Boston come back twice on power plays.

Esposito assisted first on a goal by linemate Ken Hodge after John Bucyk's shot was stopped, then passed to Bobby Orr late in the second period to tie again.

But Esposito was hurt early in the third period and was not on the ice when Merrick and left wing Floyd Thomson began a two-man rush.

Thomson flipped the puck to Merrick as Dallas Smith and Carol Vadnais pursued, and Merrick quickly released a rising shot beating goaltender Roos Brooks.

"I've had so many shots that didn't go in I wasn't sure about that one either," Merrick conceded.

Boston's loss, its fourth in a row over two seasons to the Blues, cost the Bruins the services of rookie center Richie LeDuc, who crashed into the boards in the third period and suffered a broken bone in his right shoulder.

And the status of the 31-year-old Esposito, who was jammed by his own stick when slashed behind the St. Louis net two minutes later, was uncertain.

Esposito was taken to Jewish Hospital for X-rays. "My stick hit his stick enough to push it into the boards," explained the Blues' Don Awrey, a former Bruin.

DISMISS THREE PILOTS

NEW YORK (AP) — Some sort of a record was set early in September when three major league baseball managers got the bounce. The Detroit Tigers dropped Billy Martin, the Pittsburgh Pirates discarded Bill Virdon after less than two seasons and the Texas Rangers dropped freshman pilot Whitey Herzog.

One day after Herzog was fired, Martin took over as Texas Ranger pilot.

Assured of winning record

SFCC, Mo. Southern tie

(Democrat-Capital Service)

JOPLIN — For the first time in the history of State Fair Community College soccer, the Roadrunners have assured themselves of a winning season. "Anything we win from here on out will have to be considered a major upset," said

SFCC coach Greg Bell Wednesday following his team's first tie of the season, 2-2, here with Missouri Southern College.

The tie gave the Roadrunners a 5-1-1 record as they head into the roughest part of their schedule. Friday at 6 p.m., Meramec Community College of St. Louis visits Centennial Park for a contest with SFCC. Meramec won the national JuCo championship a year ago and is currently ranked third in the nation.

Saturday at 8 p.m., another St. Louis power, Florissant Valley Community College, will be in action against the Roadrunners in Centennial Park. Earlier this season, Flo Valley was ranked in the top 10.

"After that we've got to go to Liberty, Mo., to play William Jewell," Bell continued. "I'm just happy that we got off to a good start early in the season."

Missouri Southern grabbed the lead with just over five minutes gone in Tuesday's game, but Pete Boss, who scored four goals in the Roadrunners last outing, tied it up on an unassisted, breakaway goal late in the period.

Bill Simon gave SFCC a 2-1 lead near the 40 minute mark of the first half, when he found the range on another breakaway.

Sophomore fullback Dan Baumstark came up the game-saver from State Fair early in the second half.

"Vic Peterson (SFCC goalie) let a shot get by, and I thought it was going to be 2-2," said Bell. "But out of no where came Baumstark. I was recording the goal and all of a sudden I looked up and he had stopped the shot. I don't know how he did it, but it saved us a possible loss," Bell concluded.

The Lions tying goal came 35 minutes into the half.

BILLY GAINS ON LEO
HOUSTON (AP) — Five active managers have piloted two or more teams in the major leagues and Billy Martin is gaining on Leo Durocher. Martin now pilots the Texas Rangers, his third major league team. Durocher has the Houston Astros after previous terms with the Brooklyn Dodgers, New York Giants and Chicago Cubs.

Met Manager Yogi Berra, Gene Mauch of the Montreal Expos and Dick Williams of the Oakland as each managed previous teams. Berra had the Yankees, Mauch the Phillies and Williams had Boston.

Now let's see what happened when everyone at the table was a master player.

South won the second spade and went after hearts. Clubs could wait.

West took his ace of hearts and led another spade.

South cashed the rest of his hearts and West discarded the deuce of clubs. Then South led that club jack and let it ride, but East held back his queen.

South did the best he could. He let his king hold the next trick and led out his 10 of diamonds. This rode around to East's jack. Back came a diamond and South could only score eight tricks.

The same eight tricks that an ordinary declarer would have scored against ordinary defenders.

By Oswald & James Jacoby

The elementary way for South to play the club suit is to lead the king and then overtake his jack with dummy's ace. If the queen drops he makes five club tricks to wind up with a couple of overtricks at his three no-trump contract. This time the queen doesn't drop and South winds up going one down.

There is a more sophisticated play available. He leads the jack of clubs first. If West plays the queen he ducks in dummy and winds up with four club tricks which are enough. If East holds the queen and takes it, South again collects those four luscious tricks in clubs.

Nixon's tape decision fails to shake misgivings

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Some Missouri Democrats see President Nixon's decision to release the tapes as a constructive gesture, but the development Tuesday failed to shake some of their misgivings.

One key Republican reacting to the decision, Missouri GOP Chairman Albert Rendlen, hinted at the possibility of future presidents being hurt by the action, which he said came in response to strong political pressure.

Past presidents were assured confidential communications within the executive branch were protected from disclosure, the Hannibal attorney said, and President Nixon's action will set a precedent.

"I hope that the people who have forced this upon us and forced the President to make such a decision haven't created a completely unworkable problem in the future," he said.

Rep. Jerry Litton, Democrat of the 6th District, said announcement of the decision brought him a feeling of relief. "I think this gives us an opportunity to let the courts continue to work their will," the freshman congressman said. "I think the public outcry should serve notice to the President that the people are insisting on a complete and thorough investigation. I don't think the President believed the American people felt this strongly until this weekend."

Warren E. Hearnes, Missouri Democratic national committeeman and former governor, expressed hope the decision by the President avoids a confrontation with the Congress. But he said, "I'm confused as to why he would do it (Tuesday) and fire everybody two or three days ago because he didn't want to do it. I just don't understand the logic."

Rep. William J. Randall, Democrat of the 4th District,

NEW YORK (AP) — Middle-class, it is claimed, is a crisis period that calls for special understanding by employers. It is a traumatic, sometimes debilitating change of life that hits men between ages 35 and 55.

If the corporation doesn't said House members should rely on their Judiciary Committee to decide now whether there is grounds for impeachment in light of the latest development.

Rep. Richard Bolling, 5th District, said, "I presume the impeachment resolved around his defying the courts. If that's resolved, I would think it would cool the issue considerably. I don't think I would support an impeachment move at this point." Bolling, too, is a Democrat.

Middleclass called corporation disease know how to deal with middle-class, says the American Management Associations, it might find itself "drained of crucial managerial resources," because the middleclass is a troubled man.

Add the word to the vocabulary that describes corporate management, a group so thoroughly studied, analyzed and labeled that one wonders how further studies can do more than create more labels and phrases.

Once the middle management men who are prone to middle-class were called bureaucrats. Now they are likely to be called technocrats.

A technocrat is the product of technology and specialization, and he is a member of the technocracy, the amalgam of specialists, scientists, engineers and technicians found in most large corporations.

No one technocrat can move a corporation; it takes the merged energies of many of them to produce a decision or other result. The individual is subordinated, which is frustrating enough.

The disease of middleclass, if it actually exists, probably has its origins way back when the young man joins the company, full of hope and ambition. He impresses management, and soon he is on a fast track.

Remember that phrase "fast track." All young men want to get on it, because it means they have been marked out for quick ascendancy through middle management. Dr. Eugene Jennings described it in "The Mobile Manager."

The fast track rider enjoys life thoroughly for a while, and probably a long time. But he sometimes gets derailed, disillusioned, dispirited. By middle age he might not look ahead anymore but, instead, reflect wistfully on life.

Such a frustrated man, we are told by Auren Uris, author of "The Frustrated Titan," subtitled "The Emasculation of the Executive," may become a sex-executive, or one who dissipates in extra-technocratic ways.

If that doesn't get him expelled from membership, or if he doesn't fall victim to middle-class, he might find himself tied to the technocrate for life by golden fetters.

Wife of plane builder among stranded tourists

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Mrs. James S. McDonnell was more than just one of the 22 St. Louis tourists stranded in Egypt during the outbreak of the Middle East war: she was the wife of the president of McDonnell-Douglas Corp., manufacturer of the F-4 Phantom jet fighter.

"I knew the Phantoms were up there," Mrs. McDonnell said as she arrived here Tuesday with the tourist group which had spent eight tense days in the Nile Hilton in Cairo.

"We would sit on the balcony at night and watch the anti-aircraft fire. Then, when we were on the bus to Benghazi, some of the group saw two Phantoms shot down," she told reporters at a news conference.

The F-4 fighter, built in St. Louis, is the mainstay of the Israeli air force and was relied upon heavily during the most recent fighting.

She admitted she had special qualms about being in Cairo while Israeli planes bombed targets nearby. She said she knew the Egyptians were aware McDonnell built the jets, but that she was treated with kindness and courtesy by the Egyptians.

Another member of the tour, which was sponsored by the St. Louis Children's Hospital, said, "If anyone was scared to death, nobody showed it."

Recommend election law revision

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — An interim committee of the Missouri Legislature recommended Tuesday that the state's election laws be revised.

The chairman of the committee, Rep. Bddy Kay, D-St. Louis, said he will introduce a bill next session calling for re-codification of the laws.

He said he'll offer another to recreate the election laws study commission which ceased to function after June 30.

Kay said several committee members, and other lawmakers, plan to offer bills on disclosure of political campaign contributions.

The committee heard complaints from several county clerks Tuesday.

Mrs. Eleanor Rehm, clerk of Jefferson County, said the overlapping of boundaries for various political subdivisions created a problem of where persons should go to vote. She recommended new legislation allowing voters to cast their ballots in the precinct where they reside, even if the polling place is not in a political subdivision which has a proposition on the ballot.

Student wounded at school

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A Sumner High School student was wounded Tuesday afternoon in the second shooting incident within the past five days near city high schools.

George Jones, 18, was grazed on the left wrist by a shotgun blast fired from a passing car. Jones, who was standing with a group of students in front of the school, was treated at city hospital. There were no other injuries.

William Wiggins, 17, was shot to death last Friday afternoon during a fight at Beaumont High School. A youth, 14, was arrested in connection with that slaying.

Police said Tuesday's violence apparently was triggered by rivalry between groups in some city schools.

"It's one school against another," one officer said.

A 14-year-old youth was arrested following another shooting incident near Sumner, police said.

Shots were exchanged between the youth and occupants of a passing car but no injuries were reported, police said.

The car was found abandoned a short time later and its occupants were being sought, police said.

Innocent plea on drug charge

ST. LOUIS (AP) — Former state Rep. John Conley Jr. entered a plea of innocent Tuesday in U.S. District Court here to three counts of narcotics violations involving the sale of drugs.

Judge Jame H. Meredith set Dec. 10 as a trial date for Conley who was free on $100,000 bond.

He was arrested Aug. 3 on a federal narcotics complaint and was indicted by the Organized Crime Strike Force grand jury last week.

One of the counts against him alleges that he conspired with Allyous "Billy" Thompson to sell narcotics. Thompson was found shot to death July 18 on the Edwardsville campus of Southern Illinois University.

Fifteen students put on probation

MADISON, Ill. (AP) — The school board reinstated 15 students and returned them to classes at Madison High School Tuesday but said the group was on probation as a result of disturbances late last week.

Superintendent John Palchiff said if any of the students engaged in further violence, chances for them to be expelled would be greatly increased.

Classes at the high school were cancelled last Friday after a rock-throwing incident between black and white students prior to the start of school. Classes resumed Monday.

Two star roles

Shirley Verrett gets ready for her double-role performance in the opera "The Trojans" at New York's Metropolitan Opera house recently. Miss Verrett was originally cast in the role of Cassandra, but when Christa Luwig, who was playing Dido, became ill, Miss Verrett took on both major female roles. It was the first time in history that any artist had ever done both roles in a single performance of the full-length version of the work.

Nixon faces more Watergate troubles

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon went to the brink and came back without Archibald Cox.

By yielding to a court order for Watergate-related tape recordings, the President stepped back from a constitutional crisis. He did so after firing Cox as special Watergate prosecutor.

And, if the White House couldn't get along with Cox as special prosecutor, getting along without him may prove difficult, too.

In Congress there is proposed legislation for a Watergate prosecutor the President cannot fire.

The White House said the President plans to have the case handled within his Department of Justice.

That is where it was six months ago, before Nixon reluctantly agreed to the appointment of a special prosecutor. He resisted that step, then took it to help resolve an earlier administration crisis, a shakeup in the Cabinet and the White House staff.

Now the Justice Department itself is shaken. Elliot L. Richardson resigned as attorney general rather than obey Nixon's order to fire Cox. And, while the Watergate case continues, it is unlikely any Nixon nominee could win the Senate confirmation required to replace Richardson on a permanent basis.

Richardson was confirmed only after promising that the special Watergate prosecutor would be fired only for extraordinary improprieties.

The Senate Judiciary Committee is meeting today to discuss just what was promised, and by whom. Richardson maintains the President has a right to change the terms under which any official was hired, and therefore did not break a promise by directing him to fire Cox.

In the House, preliminary impeachment inquiries continued despite Nixon's decision to re-appoint the tapes.

White House officials said Tuesday the firing of Cox was neither planned nor foreseen when Nixon announced a so-called compromise on the tapes. But there clearly were some in the White House who had wanted Cox ousted in any event.

Birth control methods are being tested

BRIGHTON, England (AP) — By 1978 women could be trying out a revolutionary contraceptive capsule which would last for more than three years, and men could be practicing birth control through an injection administered every three to six months, an expert predicted today.

Prof. Rodney Shearman of the department of obstetrics and gynecology of Sydney University, Australia, said the capsule for women would be implanted in the arm or the buttock. It would gradually dissolve and would not have to be removed, he told the 21st annual conference of the International Planned Parenthood Federation.

The 500 delegates from more than 100 countries heard that birth control injections for men are already being tested in the United States and are due to start soon in Australia. Shearman did not specify where these experiments are being carried out.
